McDONNELL BROTHERS,
Dealers in Dark Blue and Gray Granite in all its forms, and granite through the great windows, undisturbed by the incessant rush and roar of the arriving
and departing trains.

He had been only six months old when
the dreadful accident happened which at one fell stroke made him fatherless and transformed him from a strong, well-developed infant to a pitiful creature, which even death refused to take.

The older man told the story even more than the younger man, as straight and manly a fellow as ever jet his green, old manly island for the better chances of the new world this side the sea, came whistling out of the round-house that morning and stopped hastily from before an incoming train. He was not seeing nor hearing anything but the rushing of the wheels.
His mates cried out to him—too late! Nobody saw it would ever forget the look of agony which distorted his handsome face when he saw the train. He had not recognized his own, the perpetual leap into the air, from which he fell back beneath the crushing wheels.

In the excitement and consternation of the time no messenger had been sent in advance to prepare the poor young man for her trouble, as she stood in the doorway with her baby crowing in her arms, when the stout bearers paused at her gates with their mangled burden. She saw a terrible fear and felt fainting—the child's tender back striking the sharp edge of the door-stone.

"What a pity it was not killed outright!" said everybody but the mother. She herself always insisted that only her constant watching over the little, flickering life kept her from going mad in the dreadful months of her bereavement.

The officers of the railway company were kind to poor Mary Bryan. They paid the expenses of the burial, and after the child had slowly mended, she was sent back to her home, and she was her about the depot to scrub the floors and keep the glass and wood-work bright and neat.

When Joe was seven years old his mother sent him to school. He had patiently, day after day, making no complaint, but she awoke suddenly one night to find him sobbing his heart out on the pillow beside her. Only by dint of long coaxing was she able to find out the cause of his grief. Some of the rougher boys more thoughtless than cruel, let us hope—had called him "Humpty," and asked him if he carried a bag of meal on his back.

Mary flamed with the fierce anger of motherhood.

"You shan't go another day," she declared. "The ruffians! I won't have my dear little put upon by the likes of them!"

So Joe's schooling had come to an untimely end. Yet, meager as was his stock of book-learning, the development of his mind far outstripped the growth of his stunted and deformed body. Everybody liked the patient little fellow, tugging man-fully at his mother's heavy water buckets and running lightly at every call of the station master. At twelve years old he had picked up no small amount of information, especially on railroad topics. He knew every locomotive on the road, understood the intricacies of sidetracks and switches, and could tell the precise moment when any particular train might be expected, with the accuracy of a timetable.

Yet the very quickness and ardor of his nature deepened his sense of his infirmity.
The gances cast upon him by the stranger eye, some pitiful, some curious, others disgust, expressive only of annoyance or dislike, rankled like so many arrows in his heart; not one missed its mark. How wistfully his eyes followed boys of his own age—bright, handsome lads—who sprang lightly up and down the steps of the coaches, or threaded their way along the crowded platforms. For one day of such perfect, untrammelled life he would have bartered all the possible years before him. Yet he never put his yearnings into words, even to his mother.

"Crooked Joe's a rum 'un," said his rough acquaintances. "He senses his trouble well enough, but he don't let on to nobody."

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

We are taught to seek a blessing.
To lighten each burden and care,
When storm clouds round us are pressing Faint hearts are pleading for aid.

Show us the cloud's silver lining.
We long to see the light of day,
Life's mystery and its meaning,
Unveil its mysteries to me.

Inspire the powers of our being.
They wait the touch of Thy hand,
Then make the precious revealing,
Thy truth we may understand.

Quicken our deepest emotion,
As we wait Thy coming day,
Our souls are waiting to know,
Increasing knowledge may flow.

Lay up your treasures in heaven,
Lest robbers there never come,
That is the counsel that is given,
There is the welcome home.

Teach us of that home immortal,
Beyond storm clouds and earthly joys,
Where loved ones wait at the portal,
Where shines the beautiful stars.

A. J. KESSELER.

POOR LITTLE JOE BRYAN.

A great railway depot may not be the best school for a boy, yet poor little Joe Bryan had scarcely known any other. He could not remember when the long waiting rooms, with their tiled floors and dreary rows of stationary seats and crowds of hurrying people, were not quite as familiar to him and more home-like than his mother's small, bare house, which he knew as little more than a place for eating and sleeping.

At an age when an ordinary boy might have been playing with his fellows, he was shut out of the world of play by the shriek of a locomotive. Joe, severely fastened in his cab, would see the trains
through the great windows, undisturbed by
the incessant rush and roar of the arriving
and departing trains.

the dreadful accident happened which at
one fell stroke made him fatherless and
transformed him from a strong, well-

which even death refused to take.

The older man told the story even more than the younger man, as straight and

Mr. Crump, the telegraph operator, was Joe's constant friend. It was he who at old moments had taught the boy to read, and had initiated him into some of the mysteries of the clicking instrument which to Joe's imaginative mind seemed some strange creature with a hidden life of its own.

It was growing toward dark one November afternoon. Joe—never an unwelcome guest—sat curled in a corner of Mr.
Crump's office, waiting for his mother to finish her work. He was laboriously spelling out by the fading light the words upon a page of an illustrated newspaper, quite unconscious of the ticking, like that of a very jerky and rheumatic clock, which sounded in the room.

Mr. Crump, too, had a paper before him, but his eyes were not on it. Suddenly he looked up, repeating aloud the words of the message which flashed along the wire.
"Engine No. 110 running wild. Clear track."

He rushed to the door, shouting the news.

"Not a second to spare! She'll be down in seven minutes!"

The word passed like lightning. In a moment the yard was in a wild commotion. Men flew hither and thither, yard engines steamed wildly away, the switches closing behind them.

The main track was barely cleared when 110 came in sight, swaying from side to side, her wheels threatening to leave the rails at each revolution. She passed the depot like a meteor, her bell clanging with every leap of the piston, the steam escaping from her whistle with the continuous shriek of a demon, and the occupants of the cab wrapped round in a cloud of smoke.

Some hundred rods beyond the depot the track took a sharp upward grade, from which it descended again to strike the bridge across a narrow but deep and rocky gorge.

Men looked after the flying locomotive,
and then at each other with blanched faces.
"They're gone! A miracle can't save them," said one, voicing the wordless terror of the rest. "If they don't fly the track over the gorge, they'll go down as soon as they strike the trestle."

The crowd began to run along the track,
some with a vain instinct of helplessness, others moved by that morbid curiosity which seeks to be "in a death."

But the locomotive, the flying rise, the speed of the runaway engine suddenly slackened.

"What does it mean? She never could
"a" die out in that time!" shouted an old lad man.

Excitement winged their feet. When the foremost runners reached the place, the smoking engine stood still in her track, quivering in every steel-clad nerve, her great wheels still whirling around and about, as if about to spring back.

"What did it? What stopped her?"
The engineer, staggering from the cab with the pallid face of the demon behind him, pointed without speaking to her side.
A little pale-faced, crooked-backed boy had unkindly, panting with exertion, been on the track. At his feet a huge coil of rope, overturned and empty.

The crowd stared, one at another, open-mouthed. Then the truth flashed upon them.

"He killed the track!"

"Bully for crooked Joe!"

"Three cheers! Hurrah! hurrah! hurrah!"

They caught the exhausted child, flinging him from their shoulders to shoulder, striving with each other for the honor of bearing him, and so, in irregular, tumultuous, triangular procession they bore him back to the depot and set him down among them.

"Pass the bad, pass!" cried one.

It had been pay day, and the saved engineer and fireman dropped in each their month's wages. Not a land in all the country that did not air with the money.
There was a crisp rustle of bills, the think of gold and silver coin.

"Out with your handkerchief, Joe!"
"Your hands won't hold it all! Why, young man—What's the matter?"

For the boy with scuffed cheeks and burning eyes had clenched both small hands behind his back—the poor, twisted back laden with his burden of deformity and pain.

"No!" he cried in a shrill high voice.
"I can't pay you. Can't you see what's wrong to me, once—just once in all my life
—to be of a little use—like other folks?"

The superintendent had come from his office. He laid his hand on the boy's head.
"Joe," he said, "we couldn't pay you if you asked money. Money doesn't pay for lives!
But you have saved us a great many dollars besides. Now you'll let us do something for you?"

"You can't! You can't! Nobody can!"
The child's voice was almost a shriek. It seemed to rend the air with the pent-up agony of years. "There's only one thing in the world I want, and nobody can give me that. Nobody can ever make me anything but 'Crooked Joe'!"

And the superintendent lifted him and held him against his own breast.

"My boy," he said in his gentle, firm voice, "you are right. None of us can do that for you. But you can do it for yourself. Listen to me! Where is the quick brain that gave you the idea of being useful? In that back of yours that has nothing to do with them? Let us help you to a chance—only a chance to work and to learn—and it will rest with you, yourself, to say whether in twenty years from now if you are alive, if you are 'Crooked Joe' or 'Mr. Joseph Bryan.'"

Visiting in C— not long ago a friend
said to me:

"Court is in session. You must go with me to hear Bryan." He looked at him somewhat commiseratingly as he answered:
"The court-room was already crowded, at our entrance, with

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton.
Friday, Oct. 2, 2 P. M.
Indications for Saturday: Fair and warmer.
H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

The Water Works.

The editorial in the Advertiser advocating the voting on the purchasing the water works at the coming city election, has caused considerable favorable comment. Before the Council takes any definite step in the matter, why wouldn't it be well to hold an old-fashioned town meeting in the Council Chamber under section eight of the City Charter, and thoroughly discuss this important question.

Section eight reads as follows:
General meetings of the citizens qualified to vote may from time to time be held, according to the right secured to the people by the constitution of this Commonwealth, and such meetings may be called by the request in writing of fifty qualified voters, setting forth the purposes thereof, shall be duly called by the City Council.

This is water question will always concern the city until some definite action is taken; it is a matter involving hundreds of thousands of dollars and should be discussed in public meetings so that the council can have the sense of the voters to guide, to a certain extent, its decision relative to placing the question on the ballot at the coming city election.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democrats held their State Convention at Worcester, on Tuesday. The attendance was very large and harmonious. Gov. Russell was nominated for governor by acclamation, and Josiah Quincy, John H. McDonough and Walter Cutting were appointed a committee to escort the nominee to the platform.

On Gov. Russell's appearance in the hall, the delegates arose, and with much enthusiasm, gave him cheer after cheer. When order was restored President Collins of the convention introduced the governor, who made an able and lengthy address, which was received with numerous applause. The resolutions, which had been carefully prepared by the committee, were read by the chairman, Hon. Edward Avery of Braintree.

The balance of the State ticket was completed as follows:
Lieutenant Governor—John W. Corcoran of Clinton.
Secretary of State—Elbridge Cushman of Lakeville.

Treasurer and Receiver-General—James S. Grinnell of Greenfield.
Auditor—William D. T. Trefry of Marblehead.
Attorney General—George M. Stearns of Chicopee.

Ward Officers Confirmed.

A special meeting of the City Council was held Wednesday evening to confirm the list of election officers appointed by Mayor Fairbanks and submitted to the regular meeting of the Council. Sixteen members were present.

Some opposition was made by Councilmen Powers and Warner to Albert Thayer being confirmed as a deputy inspector in Ward Three. They claiming that he was not a Democrat.

Mayor Fairbanks was summoned. He was asked if he had not asked each political party to present names, and if they had not done so. He said that he did, and that he took the liberty to make some changes.

The list as printed in the DAILY LEDGER of Sept. 22 was then confirmed, and the meeting adjourned.

The Exposition.

A grand opening at Mechanics' Building, Boston, on Monday next, Oct. 5th, of the Food and Health Exposition, which many of our readers will be delighted to attend. It will not only be attractive and pleasing, but one which persons should attend who desire to encourage the Grocers' Association in furthering articles that are healthy and free from adulteration.

We shall visit it ourselves and shall expect to meet in the hall many from this city. They say that "all who eat should go," and as the most of our readers are included in this class, there certainly must be many from Quincy. There are six acres of floor space with hundreds of novel and attractive exhibits.

Brookton Fair.

This attractive fair is having grand weather and immense gatherings each day. Over thirty thousand persons were there Wednesday and as many more on Thursday. Probably not less than one thousand from this city were among the visitors. Those who have never been can hardly imagine what a motley gathering, from all parts of the state, gather on the society's grounds. There are many reasons for this: Their fair is the best in the state and one goes without feeling that the price charged is small; the exhibits in the building are grand and very extensive; the cattle are the finest in the state; the poultry cannot be excelled; and the trotting, balling, base ball, etc., make one grand exhibit which worth going one hundred miles to see.

He says he has had a most enjoyable trip and his trip home, with the exception of a few days, was very pleasant.

All that the Councilman said in relation to the wretched condition of Granite street is true, but nothing can be expected of the order introduced. The appropriation for general repair of streets is practically exhausted, and even were it not it is doubtful if enough could be spared from it any year to put the street in repair. A special appropriation will be necessary, and quite a large one too.

Many voters of West Quincy paid their first visit to Hendricks Hall Monday and many of them were much pleased with the new voting place. It is large and well lighted; the things which add much to its popularity. There is but one fault to be found with it, namely: that it is situated too far down for the convenience of many of the voters. It looks as if many of the voters did not care to walk so far as to vote in the new place, and if the hall was situated a little more centrally the voters of Ward Two could rejoice in the fact of having the most desirable place of voting in the city.

It seems after his second marriage Capone went to work in Ireland, and a year or two later he came back to this country. He is now in this city. He was a pretty little Italian girl from Boston, named Angelina Campana, to whom he was married by City Clerk Spear.

Ratification Meeting.

The Republicans of this city held a well attended ratification meeting Saturday evening at Hancock Hall. John F. Merrill, chairman of this committee, opened the meeting and introduced Hon. Henry O.

Fairbanks as president of the evening.

Major Fairbanks, in accepting the office,

spoke briefly, saying they had met to ratify the nomination of those whom our delegates have selected for our standard bearers. We have a clean ticket and back of it the Republican party. Protection to American industries is inscribed on our banner, and under the leadership of these we lead us to victory. Mayor Fairbanks

then introduced the first speaker,

Hon. J. C. Burdette.

Chairman of the State Central committee,

Mr. Burdette said it seems that the voters

did not realize the importance of casting his vote right. Those matters that should be considered by the voters are left in the background.

The Republican party is a national party and national politics effect the working man more than anything else, and you can not keep up the national party if every other year you turn round and say it does not make any difference whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, no party can be held together without a bold front.

You have fifteen hundred Republican voters which you should turn out at the polls next November. It is easier for you to get them out than for one individual.

We are told that is a question of man this year. Gov. Russell has attended the fair and made himself solid with the military man to get more votes. It is a question of politics and not of men. Does anyone question the people, who have

James Blair? He has been one of the best of foreign policies and demonstrated to every one that he is a patriot and statesman, qualified for any office the people can give him, (applause).

In closing Mr. Burdette urged his audience to their full part of the will keep in this campaign, not only to vote themselves

but see that all do so.

Hon. E. P. Allen

was then introduced as one who honored

the state of Michigan in Congress.

Congressman Allen was received with loud applause, and on taking the floor said he hoped there was some Democrats present, but they were not. He said that Republicans. He did not expect to see many Democrats because there were few, and after next November there would be less and they would be very lonesome.

There are some men who are Democrats who do not know why they are, except that their fathers were Democrats; they are always at the polls, while Republicans are apt to look at the weather and other things before they vote. A man with a ballot has a weapon which if intelligently used can overturn monarchs and bring right to the strong, yet there are men who keep away from the polls on the mere excuse

We occasionally get whipped because of this reason.

Tell us one thing the Republican party has done that any Democrat who loves his country would dare change if he had the power, the party has ever marched and the Democrats come up and lay out streets. The committee had already considered the extension, and given particulars leave to withdraw.

Congressman Sherman favored the order of the "Bitterment Act" could be applied, and inquired what was being done relative to the act.

The order calling for the acceptance of

Chapter 51 of the Public Statutes in Congregational Conference.

The sixty-fifth semi-annual meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Congregational churches was held with the Evangelical

Church of this city, Tuesday, Tuesday.

The church at the altar was very tastefully trimmed with plants and flowers and the attendance thus far has been unusually large.

The order of service was commenced at 9:15 by devotional services which were led by Rev. Daniel Evans of East Weymouth.

The devotional exercises were followed by the organization which was followed by

Chairman—Rev. Isaac C. White, Bridgewater.

Secretary—Rev. E. O. Dyer, South Brai-

ne.

Assistant Secretary—Rev. Daniel Evans,

East Weymouth.

At 10:30 A. M. Rev. J. C. Labaree of Randolph opened a discussion of the following topic: "The care of young converts

by the church."

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH.

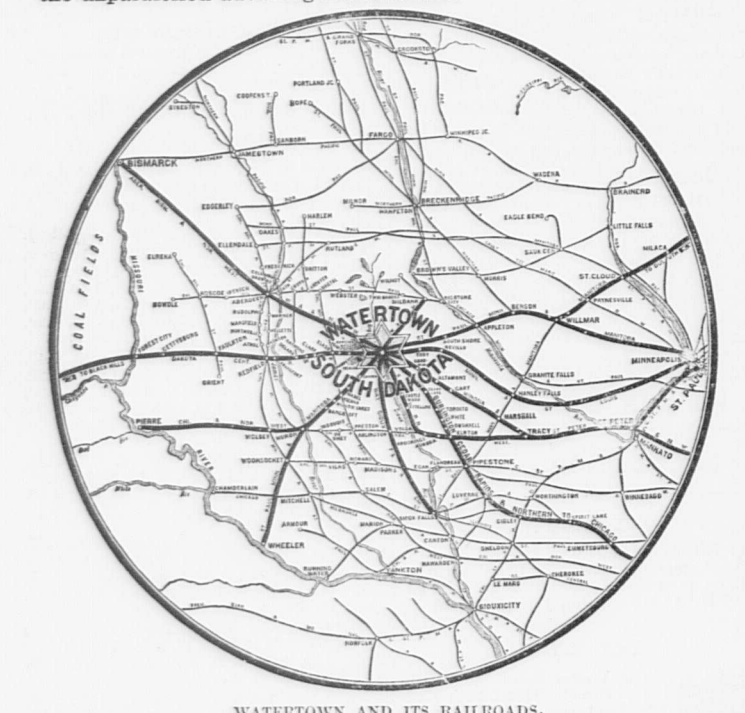

THE LARGEST FACTORY OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD.

Beware of paint and paste polish said to be labor saving, self-shining, etc., which stain the hands, pit the iron, and fill the house with a poisonous and sickening odor when heated. Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with inflammable liquid stove polish, paints and enamels in bottles. "The Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every purchase.

VITALLY IMPORTANT TO MANUFACTURERS.

Within a radius of 850 miles, just one-half the distance to New England, the manufacturer of WATERTOWN, SOUTH DAKOTA, reaches a population of 26,000,000 people. He is nearer to St. Paul, Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Memphis, St. Louis, and the adjacent countries than the Eastern manufacturer; besides having the West and Northwestern cities and countries at his door.

The Eastern manufacturer has his drummers all over the West selling his manufactured products. The FREIGHT alone on raw materials to the East, and on the manufactured goods back to the West, would be in itself an immense profit; all this freight on goods, sufficient to supply 26,000,000 people, would be clear profit to the manufacturer in Watertown over the manufacturer in New England. With the advantages of cheap living and cheap local freights, it would seem that those who come first to this great railroad distributing centre would soon become the leaders in their respective branches. Look closely at following Map and see the unparalleled advantages of location.

Study the following tables and decide where your interests lie. Comparative average per cent of Net Profits in various Branches of Manufactures in Eastern and Western States.

	EASTERN.	WESTERN.
Flax, Hemp and Jute Goods,	3 1/2%	19 1/2%
Cordage and Twine,	3 1/2%	17 1/2%
Boots and Shoes,	4 1/2%	17 1/2%
Agricultural Implements,	12 1/2%	33 1/2%
Woolen Goods,	5 1/2%	17 1/2%
Worsted Goods,	2 1/2%	14 1/2%
Paper and Wooden Boxes,	8 1/2%	12 1/2%
Clothing,	14 1/2%	33 1/2%
Starch Manufacturing, (Western States except the Eastern),	17 1/2%	19 1/2%
Straw-Board "	16 1/2%	24 1/2%

These startling figures are enough to paralyze the manufacturer in the East, when he considers the advantages his Western rival has and must have manufacturing, as he is in the midst of the raw material.

To illustrate, the manufacturer of woolen and worsted goods doing business in the East has to bring his wool from the West, pay his freight from the West to the East, and after the wool is manufactured the goods back to the West.

60 per cent. of wool sold; the manufacturer in the East buys his wool in the West, it costs an average of $120 per car to carry his wool to New England; i. e., he pays $48 freight on the wool, and $72 on the dirt.

Woolen and worsted mills in Watertown SAVE all this freight; they can buy at their doors the best grades of wool at the lowest market price, and have in return the BEST MARKET PRICE for their manufactured goods.

The $72 per car freight on the dirt in the wool is a large per cent. on the profit side of the Western manufacturer's ledger.

The Freight on his goods to the 26,000,000 people in above mentioned radius of 850 miles is much less than from the Eastern factories, which is

Living Expenses are much lower in Watertown than in New England, soon aggregating a large

Similar arguments apply with even stronger force to other branches particularly that of manufacturing STRAW BOARDS for which purpose you can contract for the next 15 or 20 years for all the straw required at the rate of from $1 to $1.50 per ton, while the same costs in New England from $9 to $13 per ton.

Literary Notes.

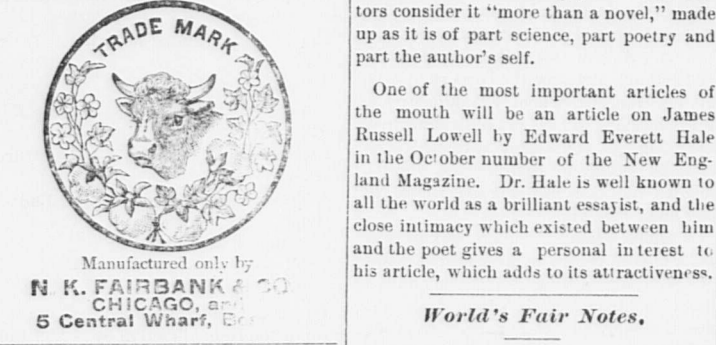

Col. Theodore A. Dodge, in an article on "The Needs of our Army and Navy" in the October Forum, makes the startling statement that "every shot from a big gun consumes $1,000." At this rate war has become a very expensive luxury.

"They have an old gardener at the House of Industry in Boston Harbor," writes William P. Andrews in the October Forum, "who has had himself committed to prison more than a hundred times. He says he 'knows when he is well off.'"

"I know a thrifty farmer," says David Starr Jordan in the October Forum, "who pays twenty-five cents a day less to those of his hands who work in the fields nearest the railroad. This he does because those workmen stop whenever the trains go by, and so they lose one-sixth of their working-time. There is a world of suggestion here."

Dr. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia has put into narrative form the ripest results of a lifetime of specially trained observation of human nature. He calls his story "Characteristics," and The Century has secured it for the coming year. The editors consider it "more than a novel," made up as it is of part science, part poetry and part the author's self.

One of the most important articles of the month will be an article on James Russell Lowell by Edward Everett Hall in the October number of the New England Magazine. Dr. Hall is well known to all the world as a brilliant essayist, and the close intimacy which existed between him and the poet gives a personal interest to his article, which adds to its attractiveness.

World's Fair Notes.

Sir Henry Wood, of the British Royal Commission, says that it is the present intention of the Commission to build at the Exposition a typical old English manor, or hall, as the English headquarters. He says that an exact reproduction of Shakespeare's house at Stratford-on-Avon will be built if the necessary space can be secured. The Executive Committee of the Illinois Woman's Alliance has asked for the privilege of making a display at the Fair which will show the results of child labor. The Oriental Consistory has appointed a committee to devise plans and a programme for the entertainment of all Scottish Rite Masons who shall attend the Exposition. Commissioner Shufeldt has cabled from Cape Town, South Africa, that an exhibit of diamonds and fashions worth $300,000 will be sent from Cape Town.

The Grounds and Buildings Committee decided to advertise for the construction of a building to accommodate four saw-mill plans. The structure will be located south of the Agricultural Annex, on piles driven into what is now a natural lagoon. The building will be 150x250 feet and will cost $25,000.

A. B. De Guerille, of Milwaukee, has been appointed a general World's Fair Commissioner, and will visit the different countries of Europe, Asia, and Northern Africa, delivering lectures on the World's Fair. The lectures will be illustrated with stereoscopic views of Chicago and the World's Fair buildings.

Senator Novice, of Maine, petitioned for the reviving of connecting light bulbs during the Exposition, and offered to pay $1,250,000 for the right to do so. The directory decided not to sanction any light bulbs.

Two granite columns for the Woman's Building have been contributed by Mrs. Alice Houghton, Lady Manager, of Washington. The columns are fifteen feet high, twenty inches in diameter, and will be placed in the main entrance on the east side of the Woman's Building.

Nicaragua wants half an acre for the site of its building at the Exposition.

THE HOGS WERE HEALTHY. Dr. Fowler, having had the occasion to treat the family of Sam Dodge, who had been remonstrated with Sam for having the pig pen so near his residence.

"What's the reason I ought to get rid of pig pen funder away from house?" asked Sam.

"Because it is unhealthy," replied the doctor.

"Reckon you is mistaken," replied Sam; "dat pen has been dar for two years, and dar ain't been no sickness yit among de hogs."

WANTED A VACATION. "I've just been discharged," said the following piece, gloomily.

"I'm going to strike," said the clock with decision.

"I'm working too much," groaned a key of beer in the cellar.

"I'm tired, too," said the wheel on the bicycle that was standing in the corner, and the only thing in the house that seemed to be enjoying itself was the garden hose that was playing on the lawn.

It appears that the government's rain-making process is a patent affair, the owner being an aged Confederate officer, Gen. Daniel Bingles. Gen. Bingles' application is dated at Austin, Tex., Feb. 22, 1870, and his papers were filed in the patent office June 7, 1880. The patent is entered "Method of precipitating rainfalls."

For the Patriot.

Sixtieth Birthday.

(Lines written by a lady on the sixtieth anniversary of her birthday, March 20, 1831.)

For sixty years with hopes and fears, I've trod my weary way; Sixty long years in smiles and tears, And here, how long to stay?

And can there be another year For me to tread this way? For me to live in smiles and tears—Before I pass away.

How long 'till we be no one can tell But God, who knows the end, How long in smiles and tears I'll dwell Before I pass away.

It can't be long, I know full well, For what I see each day, That I in smiles at death shall dwell Before I pass away.

God, grant me thy sustaining hand To guide me on the way, Till I shall reach that happy land, No more to pass away.

In youth and prime my sixty years I've lived, and now I'm old, And yet I'm on the way To threescore years and ten.

To my three children may I be A guide from day to day; That thought of them may give me peace, When I shall pass away.

Household Receipts.

CHEAP CREAM PIE. One cup of sugar, three cups of milk and one teaspoonful of salt. Let these get boiling hot. While they are heating stir free from lumps one and one-half cups of flour into one coffee-cup of cold milk, then pour it into the boiling milk, stirring constantly till it boils again, then add one teaspoonful of extract of lemon, and set it away to cool. Whisk will make three pies. Bake six crusts and fill them with the mixture.

COFFEE FRENCH CREAM. Soak six eggs of gelatine in a cup of cold water and two cups of strong coffee. When all dissolved add 2-1/2 cups of sugar; let it stand in hot water until the sugar is all dissolved; then strain. Put it into a pan of ice water and beat it quick until it begins to thicken; then add a quart of cream beaten until it is quite stiff. Pour into moulds. Serve with custard or hot cream.

APPLE PUDDING. Beat two eggs well with two tablespoonfuls of sugar; add a piece of butter the size of a walnut and one pint of milk; add flour enough to make the batter a little thicker than for griddle cakes; add one teaspoonful of baking powder and four large apples sliced; stir all well together; turn into a pudding-pail or any pail with a tight cover, and set in a kettle of boiling water; boil hard two hours; serve with sweetened cream or cold sauce, flavored.

BOTTLED PICKLES.—Soak 100 fresh cucumbers two inches long in strong brine twenty-four hours; pour off the brine and rinse in clear water. Soak the cucumbers in three quarts of vinegar containing one cup of sugar, one ounce of stick cinnamon, quarter of an ounce of cloves, quarter of an ounce of pepper corns, and a few slices of ginger radish root, and dip them into jars. Seal while hot. This quantity of cucumbers will fill four quart jars.

ROAST CUCUMBER PICKLE. Wash and pack in earthen jars, cover with boiling water; let stand overnight. In the morning turn off the water, take same quantity of vinegar and boil with a cup of salt, half cup of sugar to the gallon of vinegar. Spice to taste. While boiling hot pour over cucumbers. Stand two weeks and boil again.

"Although we have been at peace with the world, yet the effect of the McKinley bill has been to greatly increase the demand on our furnace factories. This in turn helps every other branch of production and trade, for when the makers of furnaces are busy somebody else must be at work to supply their demands."

"The manufacturers of plush goods in this country report remarkable increase of business under the McKinley bill. Concerns that were on the verge of bankruptcy have been revived, and mills that were close are now earning handsome dividends."

To test melons is a difficult matter, but by scraping off the thin rind with the thumb nail, if the edges of the skin on each side of the scar are left ragged or granulated the melon is ripe, but if the edges of the scar are smooth and even, and the skin is not so much off clean, then the melon is green.

A little innocent misunderstanding is sometimes very helpful in helping one to a hard place. "Mabel," said the teacher; "you may get a kitten." "Kitten?" said Mabel.

"Kitten" has two f's, then, has it?" "Yes, ma'am; our kitten has."

Somebody gave little Augustus two toys. "I will give this one to my dear little sister," he said, showing the larger one. "Because it is the prettier?" said his delighted mamma.

"No," he replied, without hesitation; "because it's broken."

A Careful Judge—"Your name is Julia Miller?"

"Yes, your honor."

"Twenty-five, your honor."

"So! Well, now that you have given your name, we will administer the oath."

"Very interesting confession in here!" asked papa, suddenly thrusting his head through the curtains into recess where Ethel, Mr. Tompkins and little Eva sat very quietly.

"Yes, indeed," said Ethel, ready on the instant with a reply. "Mr. Tompkins and I were discussing all our kith and kin, weren't we, Eva?"

"Yeah, that with you with. Mither Tompkins thaid, 'May I have a kith?' and Ethel thaid 'You kin.'"

Willing to Try—"The floor is very slippery," he remarked when he asked her for a dance. "Do you think you could hold me, if I should dance to fall?"

"I-I guess so," he faltered, dismayed at the idea; but the light broke forth. "Come out on the piazza," he whispered, "and I can practice for a while."

Park Theatre.

I never laughed so much in my life as I have on every side as the people pour forth from the Park Theatre to see "County Fair" with Ned Burgess as Count Abigail is a prime favorite, and the easy little theatre is full and overflowing every evening. Count Abigail is a delightful comedy speller, with two interesting satires; while Tag a New York waiter, a handsome Jersey cow and a high spirited racing colt all combine to make this one of the most popular plays ever given in Boston. The barn scene with the country boys and girls singing the floor huskies, corn, the singing and dancing by the huskers is all very natural even to finding the red ear. The climax is reached in the last act when Count Abigail's colt runs in the horse race at the County Fair and wins $200 and saves the farm from being sold at mortgagee's sale.

Boston Theatre.

It is wonderful what a hold "The Old Homestead" seems to have on the people who never go to the theatre have been to see it and are loud in their praise. So good is the play that many from Quincy have been to see it two and three times, and want to go again. Small parties are made up nearly every night while clubs and lodges attend in a body. The singing is made a special feature in "The Old Homestead" and is fine especially in the scene in which Grace, the New York girl, is represented and the solo, "The Palms," is sung; also the singing about the mill while the farm hands are drinking from the bucket of cold, sparkling water.

Holistic Street Theatre.

Rose Coghlan in "Dorothy's Dilemma" has had a great success the past week and gives an all too brief engagement tonight. For next week commencing Monday evening, October 5, John J. McNally's "Boys and Girls" is to be the attraction.

Boston Museum.

It is with regret that this week sees the last of that quaint old play "Ye Earlie Trouble," at the Museum. Piner's new comedy, "The Schoolmistress," is announced for Monday, Oct. 5, and said to be one of the most laughable pieces ever put upon the stage.

Boston Horse Show.

The third exhibition of the Boston Horse Show Association takes place Oct. 20, 21, 22, 23, at the new building erected by the Horse Show Association for holding their exhibitions in and for having a general horse building in Boston for riding and other purposes. The new building, which is called the "Arena," is situated on the corner of Tremont and Chandler streets, Boston, and is the most novel building of the kind in this country.

The Eiffel tower is evidently a financial success. Over $55,000 has been paid for admission to it by visitors since March 25, last, when its first season commenced. Poetry.
He Remembered.
BY CAROLINE EAGLEFIELD CONDIT.

"Remember!" mamma said, "As she impressed her message on the some-thing that she had left behind her." "Casto cotton, number forty; now don't forget! one spool!" Be sure and bring it home to me before you go to school!" Her little son replied: "All right, I'll come back again if I can catch a ride." Then hurried off on riding belt, and really thought no more About his message till he reached the only country store.

The clerk in waiting stood While Ned, perplexed, endeavored to remember what he could; Then suddenly the thought came back with reassuring ease, He brightened: "Give me forty spools of jockey cotton, please!" - Wide Awake.

Miscellany.

A WIFE'S TRIUMPH.

"I don't deny but what I was considerably surprised to hear of Joe's marriage," said Mr. Ailesbury, sitting in his wheeled chair in the sunshine. "I didn't know he had no such idea in his head. But everything happens for the best, and the old place is clean run down for want of a nice stirlin' housekeeper. Berenice Stubbs charges a dollar and a half a week, and wants the wash 'put out, at that. Things didn't go this 'ere way in the life time of my second departed-er, nor yet while my first was livin'." "I will 'now to confess that I was sort o' trimmled over in my mind the idea of asking Pauline Jones' wife, if she'd any objections to share my solitary lot; but this marriage o' Joe's puts things in a different light. I wasn't stirlin' but what he was going to be an old bachelor. I do hope his wife will be a clean, sensible, and flannin' calks, and soft soap. She was fairly ruinin' me with bar soap bought at the store. And there's all my two deceased parnter's calico gowns upstairs, in the blue paper under the bed, and sooty sooty, that I almost seemed as if the grass of the door-yard, like the harelips of Sir Walter Scott's poem, must have 'risen calks from her tread.' Her stalwart husband, standing beside her, looked down with beaming pride on her miniature beauty."

"Why, yes, pet," said he. "Isn't it like what you had fancied?"

The bride laughed hysterically.

"Not in the least," said she. "But I dare say I was absurdly fanciful."

"I guess," said Mr. Ailesbury, "that Mrs. Joe had better change that dinky dress for something plainer, and help Berenice Stubbs with the supper. Berenice is sort o' plagued with neurally today."

"She's too tired to do much tonight, father," said Joe.

"Tired! What's she done? I don't call it hard work to go ridin' in the railroad cars. Do you?"

Berenice Stubbs, a hard-faced female with a waist like the town pump, and sharp, twinkling eyes flatched with white-lashes, regarded Mrs. Joseph Ailesbury with scant favor.

"Don't look a bit as if she could worry through a day's wash," said she.

"These small folks is powerful wiry some," said the sister Ailesbury. "My first dear deceased wasn't no taller than Mrs. Joe-but my! what a hand she was to turn off work!"

When Mrs. Joe came in from the garden after tea with a bunch of clover plinks in her hand, her father-in-law was ready to accept her.

"Now you're here, Mrs. Joe," said he, "to sort o' see to things, I've told Berenice Stubbs she can go home for a half a week, and I'm curious to find out what sort of a housekeeper you'll make."

Distributing depot at
W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

"I dare say she'll turn out a capital housekeeper, father," said he. "But you won't find out about it at present. I'm going to take her to Welland Falls to see Cousin Simon Ailesbury. Her mother used to know Cousin Simon years ago."

"What, all that way?" croaked the farmer.

Joe nodded.

"Traveling's dreadful expensive."

"Well, it costs something," admitted Joe.

"And you'll have to stop overnight at some tavern."

"Yes."

"It seems to me," growled the old man, "that all this is a senseless waste of money. You'd both of you a deal better settle down and go to work. I didn't go mooning around the country when I married my dear deceased first, nor yet my dear deceased second. Life is made for work, for play."

"That's enough for that, father," said the reckless Joe. "A man doesn't get married-ordinarily, oftener than once in a life-time."

When she drew a long breath of relief when she found herself out from under the farm-housekeeper's rule.

"Joe," said she, "I'm afraid I'm going to be an awful disappointment to your father."

As long as you're not a disappointment to me," he retorted, laughing. "It doesn't so much signify."

"There must be a deal of work in that house-four cows, a hundred turkeys, a dock of sheep, a poultry yard full of Leg-horn fowls, butter, eggs, cooking, washing, baking, scrubbing-"

"How do you know all that?" asked he.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton,
Friday, Oct. 16, 2 p. m.
Indications for Saturday: Fair and warmer.

Harvest Festival.

The ladies of the Universalist society held their annual harvest festival Wednesday. An old fashioned supper was served from six to seven, and was up to the usual high standard of excellence. The supper was well patronized, but still more people came for the entertainment and the vestry was full. The Old Colony time table was responsible for a delay and change in the entertainment, and the conduct of some rough boys in the rear of the hall caused the programme to be considerably shortened. The opera by the young people in fancy costumes was very catchy and pleasing, receiving well merited encouragement. Following the opera, solos were rendered by Miss Elsie Kittredge and Mr. J. Harvey Page. Both were in good voice and deserving of great praise.

The candy table, Mrs. E. E. Hall's surprise table, and the useful articles were all well patronized. Perhaps the auction of fruits and vegetables by Auctioneer Lombard was as liberally patronized as anything during the evening, for Joe has a way of telling stories and interesting his hearers, and then they buy almost before they know it. By the whole the affair was quite a success.

Theatricals.

An event of more than usual interest occurs in Quincy, during the last week in October. Mrs. William Amory entertains a party of young people that week at her summer residence, "Seven Oaks," Quincy. Among her guests will be Mr. Erast J. Johnson, of the "Amateur Comedy Club" of New York, and "Hasty Pudding Club" of Cambridge; Mr. Daniel Paine Griswold, also of the "Amateur Comedy Club," and "Hasty Pudding Club," and Mrs. Daniel Paine Griswold. These talented young people have most kindly consented to give two theatrical performances in aid of the Quincy City Hospital, in the Unitarian chapel, in Quincy, on Friday evening, October thirty-first, and Saturday afternoon, October first. A most brilliant and pleasing performance may be expected. Tickets at one dollar each may be obtained by addressing Mrs. William Amory, "Seven Oaks," Mrs. T. A. Wheeler, Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. William B. Rice, Mrs. J. F. Faxon, Mrs. G. S. Koye, Mrs. W. J. Dewson, Adams street, Mrs. Lewis Bass, Granite street, Mrs. Eben Stanton, Hancock street, and also at the store of Mr. John O. Holden, Hancock street, Quincy.

Telephone Wire Down.

The electric car, leaving Quincy Point about 6.45 Tuesday evening, met with an obstruction when near the Public Library on Washington street. A telephone wire had been blown down in the lane and rested upon the trolley wire, and ran along the ground to Austin & Winslow's express office. When the trolley struck the wire it caused flashes which frightened the passengers. The motorman shut off the lights, and the women screamed. Outside the telephone wire lay across the street and emitted flashes. The wire was finally cut by a line man.

All the telephones on the line were burned out. A. N. B. Fernald's there was nearly a fire. The telephone office was filled with smoke.

Fortunately no one was injured. The thoughtfulness of Mr. A. W. Stetson and others was commendable.

Absolute Power of the Mayor.

As the charter of Quincy gives its Mayor full power, it might be well for our citizens to read what the Boston Journal has to say on this subject, in regard to Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"People who believe that a panacea for municipal misrule is to be found in charters which give absolute and untrammelled responsibility to the Mayor, must be somewhat shaken in their opinion by the following closely the history of the ten years' experiment in Brooklyn. Under Seth Low the experiment worked well, and it would have continued to work well if men of his type had succeeded him, but the administration of Mayor Chapman, now drawing to a close, has been marked by scandals which reveal the most characteristic performances of Tammany. Since the Mayor's resignation, the present administration of Mayor Chapman presupposes the right type of man in the Mayorship, but when the politicians cease to recognize any necessity of 'padding to the better sentiment of the community,' and that sentiment is nervous and unorganized and unable to help itself, the greater the responsibility and power of the Mayor under reformed charters, the greater his capacity for mischief."

The Joint Debate.

The political debate, between J. E. Russell and Hon. H. C. Lodge, will take place in Boston on Oct. 23; length of debate, 2 hours and 30 minutes; John E. Russell opens with 45 minutes; H. C. Lodge follows with 45 minutes; Hon. E. Russell, 30 minutes; H. C. Lodge closes with 30 minutes; no band; doors open at 7 o'clock.

There will be 2,500 tickets issued which will be equally divided between the two parties, each to distribute their own. Each party will have an equal number of seats on the platform, floor and balconies. Tickets of the two parties will be of different color and will tell where bearer is expected to enter hall. Democratic tickets will be signed by secretary of the Democratic committee. Republican tickets will be signed by secretary of the Republican State committee. Hon. John E. Sanford of Taunton will preside.

Poor Accommodations.

The Old Colony and the Fitchburg roads are competing sharply for patronage at Marlboro. Consequently the former road's new timetable gives Marlboro three new passenger trains. Brocton, without any competing road, loses one of the most important trains of the day—the noon train to Boston.—Brocton Enterprise.

It is a pity that Quincy and Brocton did not have competing railroads, then better attention would be given to their large travel. No station on the Old Colony has so many passengers as Quincy, yet citizens from other stations, with one-quarter the number of passengers, have much better accommodations.

The Exposition.

The Food and Health Exposition at Mechanics' building, Boston, is meeting with great success. The fine exhibits, and the large crowd of visitors from all over New England and the Provinces make the fair a credit to Boston, and it is to be continued through October.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Elizabeth L. widow of the late John C. Randall, died at her residence on Washington street on Wednesday last, at the age of 72. She was a woman of much ability and influence; and a mother of a large and noted family of children, in whom she took much interest and pride. The funeral services were held on Friday at 12 m., and was very largely attended by relatives and friends.

HOTELS BURNED. A fire at Nantasket beach, on Wednesday morning last, destroyed the Rockford hotel and the Hillside house; also damaged Taylor's tavern. Loss about $10,000.

CITY BRIEFS.

John Q. McDonnell of Buffalo, N. Y., is in town.

It is the weather that calls out winter overcoats. The Sons of Veteran drum corps will hold an assembly Oct. 20.

Rev. B. F. Eaton will preach in the Universalist church on Sunday, at 10.30 A. M.

Adams beach was strewn with laths Tuesday which were probably washed from some vessel.

Mrs. Russell Keene and children of Charlestown are the guests of Mrs. Charles B. Tilton.

Commencing this week the afternoon session of the public schools begins at 1.30 and close at 3.30.

There will be a meeting of the Fragment Society in the chapel next Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 2 p. m.

The teachers of the public schools met at Plummer's hall, Tuesday afternoon, and formed a class in gymnastics.

Mayor Fairbanks spoke briefly as follows: Friends, we have assembled here this evening to encourage by our presence the efforts of those who are engaged in the noble endeavor of bettering the resources which will enable them in procuring suitable instruments and appropriate uniforms. This ambition may be in one sense directly to their own benefit, but in a broader way it affects in all its citizens of Quincy. Every city should be proud, having in its midst a social organization, from which so much pleasure is derived. We all admit the pleasure which comes to us as we see a finely equipped band marching along the street, and the strains of sweet music which we listen to, is most pleasant to our ears, and so it is our duty to encourage the efforts of those whose aim it is, to reflect credit upon themselves and upon our city by a fine appearance in public and giving to their citizens still better music and by the encouragement they can strive to be second to none. Willing hands have labored to spread before you many useful articles, and kindly ask you to render such financial assistance as you can cheerfully afford.

And I can assure you that the sincere thanks of the members will also be yours for the aid thus given, and to you will come also the pleasant satisfaction of aiding a working object. So it is my pleasant duty to declare the fair opened, and hoping for it that success which it deserves.

Miscellany.
How She Told Her Love.
"Marry you? Not on any consideration. Why, Mr. I mean John, of course not."
Such was the disconnected reply, which blue-eyed Nellie Loring gave to John Hartwell's request that he would be his wife.
He, looking gravely at her, answered:
"But I am very rich and can surround you with every comfort. More than that, I can help your father out of his troubles and can put your brothers in the way of getting good starts in life. More than that,
and most of all, I tell you for the hundredth time, Nellie, that I love you."
The girl grew pale, and, for a moment, seemed to falter. Then her lips became set, and, returning his glance with one less steady than his own, she said:
"You tempt me sorely, John, but I must not yield."
"Tell me one thing," he pleaded. "Do you love me?"
Her cheeks grew painfully red, then white. He seemed as he did to try to say "Good-bye," and she herself made an effort to speak a word of farewell; but the rising tears choked her utterance, and sadly and silently she walked up the garden path to the door of her home. Once within the friendly shelter, she hastened to her chamber, and, throwing herself across her bed, let the tears flow freely.
"Love him—love him," she moaned.
"Oh, John, I would die to make you happy. Oh, why do things go so wrong?"
And with weeping self-reproaches
she spent the long summer months.
Meanwhile John had gone to his hotel, paid his bill, and taken the first train to the city.
The story of the events which had led up to this scene just described, was not a long one.

CARD.
THE undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding townships for the patronage during the past year. This year our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.
We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Fall Patterns in Wall Papers and Moundains. We have a few lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come and examine.
In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first class work.
We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.
Cotting Decorating a special feature in our work.
We also keep a man for Whiting, Sweeping and Tinting. Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Stairs and Windows.
Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices.
Give us a trial.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
Address P. O. Box 82, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,
F. T. APPLETON.

Ex-Councilman Dead.

The ranks of the first City Council of Quincy have again been invaded by death's messenger, who has removed a much respected citizen, Mr. Levi Searns.

Mr. Searns was born in Boston Nov. 29, 1829. He followed the sea in early life, and was among those attracted to California by the gold fever. Returning East he settled in Quincy where he was for many years a blacksmith and tool sharpener. Since the erection of the John Hancock school building he has been its janitor.

The deceased was a prominent Mason of long standing. He was Worshipful Master of Rural Lodge of this city in 1867 and 1868, and has for many years been a member of the lodge. He was also a Past High Priest of St. Stephens Chapter, R. A. Masons. The Masons attended his funeral in a body on Tuesday afternoon.

A Square Schoolhouse.

Mayor Fairbanks had presented to the Council Monday a request that the Committee on Public Buildings examine plans for an eight-room brick schoolhouse for South Quincy. A similar schoolhouse was built a short time ago, at Manchester, N. H., and won the prize for the best plan of an eight-room brick school, which was presented to the Manchester School Committee, out of a large number of plans. The building on its completion attracted the attention of school superintendents from all parts of New England. There were but a very few minor defects in its arrangement, and it stands today as the model eight-room school building in this part of the country.

The city of Malden in the mean time desired in one of its wards, an eight-room brick building. After an exhaustive examination of various plans and buildings the school committee and superintendents of schools, decided in favor of the Manchester style of building, and the Belmont school was built. This is the building, with a few unimportant changes, which Mayor Fairbanks desires the city to build. Architecturally it is a handsome building, built of pressed brick with freestone trimmings. It will cost, when ready for occupancy about $31,000, this is some six or eight thousand dollars less than the proposed schoolhouse.

Unknown Man Killed.

The 345 yard train, Wednesday, discovered a man lying on the track near President's bridge. The train was stopped when it was found the man had been struck by an outboard train sometime during the night and killed.

The Medical Examiner was notified and the remains removed to Hall's undertaking rooms.

The wheels of the train had passed over his arm and he was somewhat cut about the face, death having probably come from the shock.

He was a man apparently about 30 years of age, five feet seven inches tall, and weighed about 180 pounds. He is a smooth face man with medium brown hair and was dressed in a light brown checked suit.

Besides other articles in his pocket there were two travelling cards from the Quaryman's Union of Stony Creek, Conn. One of these cards was made out to Jacob Hillback and the other to Jacob Willback, these names may lead to his identification.

The body is still at Hall's undertaking rooms, not as yet having been identified. Among other things on his person was a baggage check of the Old Colony between Boston and Quincy. This check produced a handbag at the Quincy depot, which came on Tuesday evening about 10 o'clock train. This was opened by the Medical Examiner but contained nothing but clothing.

From this it is evident that the man was on his way to Quincy, either to accept a job or in search of one.

Fountain.

The fountain committee met on Wednesday evening to consider the last work for the fountain. It is decided to put a small inscription upon it in bronze, some what like this: "Given by the Inhabitants of Quincy, or 'Voluntary Contributions by Inhabitants of Quincy.' This will be another added small expense. They may be forced to solicit further contributions from a few who have already given liberally as they wish earnestly to dedicate it to the middle of November. The committee is also receiving from Mr. Wilson Tisdale and Mrs. William Amory. If the same plan of waiting for generous responses that has been pursued the past three years is carried out, no doubt the remaining $100 needed, will be sent in; but it is hoped that the many who have not yet given, and who will be benefited by the fountain, will send in something to help out now.

Last evening the second entertainment in the Star Course of the Y. M. C. A. was greeted with an appreciative and well-paying house, over one hundred single admission tickets being sold. Nearly every section was heartily enjoyed. The Ship Brothers are surely experts at bell-ringing, and Messrs. Jarry and Charles W. can make the tubular tubular, June 10, 1890.

Mr. John O'Keefe of South street had a narrow escape from instant death at the City stone crusher on Saturday. Some of the men were employed in carrying logs to the top of the cliff for the purpose of covering a blast. One of the logs weighing about a hundred pounds was left on the edge of the cliff and in some manner it was disturbed and fell to the bottom a distance of about forty-five feet striking Mr. O'Keefe a side blow on the back. Luckily it did not strike him squarely; it would undoubtedly have killed him.

The report that it is the intention of Quincy & Boston Street Railway Company or its president, Mr. John R. Graham, to erect a building with large hall on the recently acquired Pierce property near the junction of Washington and Hancock street, is very welcome news. Quincy is suffering, yet actually suffering for want of a large hall. There is no suitable place for a grand political rally, a mass meeting of any kind, a grand concert, or ball, or entertainment. A really good thing, like the opera of Priscilla recently presented, has to put its tickets so high that the people won't attend, while at popular prices a much larger hall would be crowded and a greater success financially. A large hall is one of the pressing needs of the city, and we hope that the project will materialize.

JOHN R. GRAHAM.

JAMES THOMPSON.

HON. JAMES HENRY FLINT.

John Robert Graham of Quincy, Republican candidate for Representative from the Fifth Norfolk District in the City Council, was born in Middlefield, Mass., June 25, 1852. His youth was passed in that beautiful Essex county town where he attended the public schools until his sixteenth year. After one term in a private school in Salem and a term in the Danvers High School, he entered the Commercial Department, preparing for College, at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., in 1869. His course at Phillips was a brilliant one and he stood at the head of his class in scholarship and graduated in 1872 with high honors; the valedictorian of his class with the highest average for scholarship that had been attained there for years. In 1872 Judge Flint entered Harvard College and as a marked tribute to his ability, he received a "Bigelow Scholarship" one of the greatest honors attainable for Freshmen, requiring the united superiority of scholarship, character, all round strength and promise for the future, an unequalled mark of distinction. He became a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, a college society which accepts only those men highest in scholarship. Immediately upon his graduation from Harvard he accepted an offer to assume the position of principal of the Marblehead High school where he remained four years. His popularity in this position is attested from the fact that he was unanimously re-elected each year and was ultimately reconsidered his resignation and remain. After spending a few months in the Agricultural Department at the State House, with his uncle, Hon. Charles L. Flint, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, he entered the Boston University Law school, taking the three years' course in one year, ranking at the head of his class and making a record unequalled by any one-year student. He then went to New York city and spent a year in one of the largest law offices in the city; afterward returning to Boston where he was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in 1882. Soon he became identified with the firm that handled the largest insolvency case ever in the New England courts.

Judge Flint has done a large amount of literary work of a legal character. Among other things he edited the American edition of "Lewin on Trusts," now published in Philadelphia, and has written "Trusts and Trustees," which is published in San Francisco. Judge Flint has been a valuable member of the Weymouth School Board for the past two years. In April, 1890, he was appointed a Special Justice of the District Court of East Norfolk, holding at Quincy. He was elected Secretary of the Republican League of Massachusetts in 1888 and ably filled that position during the last Presidential campaign, doing much quiet, but effective work in behalf of the party. He is prominently identified with the Knights of Pythias, having been a past commander, and is a past ward of Safety Lodge 96, New England Order of Protection. He is also a member of Delta Lodge of Free Masons, and a past junior warden. He is also an active member of the Weymouth Club and its vice president. He has ever taken a deep and active interest in all public matters, and is ever ready to give time and service in every good cause. Judge Flint is in the active practice of his chosen profession, and has an office at No. 39 Court street, Boston.

Mr. Flint is a thoroughly self-made man, born to a farmer's life, he worked early and late, spending the evening hours up to the night in reading, study, and work, at last, starting out for an education he worked his way through school, college and the law school. He never hesitated at the hardness of his task, or the difficulties which arose before him. He is the friend of all sympathizers with the workingmen of whom he claims to be one.

Poetry.
An Autumn Rain.
BY CARL SMITH.

The long loughs of the oak-tree
That stands across the way
Are waving, waving, waving,
While many winds are playing
At turning leaves to-day.

The drops strike sadly, wildly,
Borne on the autumn wind,
And grandmothers of juncos
And dog-wood flowering crimson
They shivering leave behind.

The sunflower's golden glory,
Which passed a month ago,
Left but a seedling waving,
Which, stanch as one it towered,
Now humbly bows as low.

Here by this tight-closed window,
Adown whose weeping pane Flows many a tearful river,
The housewife's shiver
Like tremors caught in the rain.

And all sweet Nature's vigor
Seems withered now and gone.
Where red and green were glowing,
There yellow blows alone.

The short rain driving onward
Bends every blade as it goes,
And each stalk sadly calling
To me it seems is saying That summer is no more.

Birthday German.

On Tuesday evening Arthur B. Holden, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Holden of Adams street, celebrated his thirteenth birthday by a German. Music for dancing was furnished by piano and violin. Wilson and Hanson musicians. The favors were very tasty and the different figures of the German were pretty and much enjoyed by the young people. Refreshments were served during the evening. Soon after ten, good nights were said and the young people departed, leaving behind tokens of their regard and wishing their young host many happy returns of the day.

Among those present were Jennie B. Field, Clara L. Baxter, Mary A. Souther, Zayna King, Alice K. Prescott, Fay Hitchcock, Ethel Keith, Annie Eaton, Edith Eaton, Gertrude Burdick, Nellie Randall, Crane, Jennie Richardson, Nellie Randall, Henry Barker, Edith Barker, Harry Rogers, Jessie Litchfield, Robert Porter, Harry Porter, Arthur Hall, Arthur West, Alex. Stoddard, Allen Howland, Charles Slade, Raymond Burke.

Water Street.

The Committee on Streets has recommended that Water street be widened forty-five feet, and the Council at last Wednesday's meeting, ordered the order to second reading.

The question of widening this street has been before the council and engrossed a large part of its time for the past three or four months. It was originally proposed to widen it to forty feet, and the Committee on Streets was instructed to report an order calling for a forty-foot street, but, after thinking the matter over, Councilman Jones, the Chairman of the Committee, moved at the meeting of Sept. 9, to rescind all action on widening Water street, he believing that there had been a change in favor of widening the street to forty-five feet. After a long debate Councilman Jones' motion was laid on the table. But he did not let the matter rest here. At the next meeting of the Council on Sept. 21, the Committee on Streets reported in favor of forty feet, as instructed.

In a lengthy speech the members of the committee from Ward Three opposed the forty-foot plan, and finally prevailed upon the Council to recommend the order to the Committee on Streets, so that a hearing on widening the street to forty-five feet could be given by the Council to interested parties. The hearing was held on Oct. 12, and much diverse testimony was brought out.

The Committee has recommended a very expensive plan of widening this street. Instead of taking all the land off of one side of the street the Committee recommend taking off of each side, in many cases bringing the street lines to the foot of the street. The Committee on Streets, to that end, has ordered the widening of the street to forty-five feet, which will consequently make their plan very costly. The Committee, if it had worked from an economical standpoint, could have begun at the junction of Water and Granite street and widened the street on the southerly side of Water street towards Franklin street until the corner easterly of Quincy street was reached; and then cross the street taking a large slice off the corner and then continuing on the northerly side of the street until Franklin street is reached. By adopting this plan which is the one which Commissioner Ewell advocates thousands of dollars could be saved to the city. The Committee has reported the land damages low, so low in fact, that it is probable if their plan is carried out that the city will be assessed by a jury to settle half or more of the claims.

Another important factor has not been taken into consideration and that is at a distant date the Old Colony will have reached the Water street grade. If this is to be done it will be to the unwise for the city to begin work on widening the street until this great work is finished.

Grand Fair.

The Paul Revere Post will open its grand fair next week at Hancock hall. The object of this fair is a grand good one—to raise money for the charity fair, which is used to help the sick and feeble who may need aid. The object being a very worthy one, all our citizens should lend their aid; even if it is ever so small it will count nobly in the aggregate. There is a number of very nice prizes to be won by those getting the most votes. The prizes are, diamond set, chamber set, cane, badge, uniform, etc.

Let all our citizens try to do something to swell the charity fund of the Post.

No-Licence Campaign.

Temperance people should immediately inaugurate their annual campaign to maintain the present large majority for no-licence in this city. In some recent years the work has been delayed until too late an hour, and what has been done has been accomplished in too much of a hurry. Take a little more time, and the victory will be easy.

Below is the summary for ten years:

Year.	No.	Yes.	Total.	Majority.	Minority.
1882	1007	457	1504	549	955
1883	1086	448	1534	628	906
1884	1107	467	1574	628	946
1885	1062	510	1572	492	1080
1886	1007	528	1535	528	1007
1887	1071	520	1591	551	1040
1888	1094	538	1632	538	1094
1889	1162	618	1780	544	1236
1890	1539	720	2259	619	1640

Last year there was a larger majority than in the preceding year but it was some 300 smaller than in 1888. The majority should be increased rather than diminished.

Larceny and Forgery.

Officers Hunt and McKay arrested Arthur E. Foley of Quincy in Boston Thursday evening for the larceny of a trunk containing clothing to the value of $55, the property of Alexander Gay.

Foley and Gay boarded at Loredos's boarding-house on Granite street, and it is alleged that on Oct. 23 Foley threw Gay's trunk out of the window and carried it away.

It is also alleged that Foley presented an order to William A. Smith, a granite dealer, signed by W. E. Brown the undertaker, in favor of Arthur E. Foley for $8 which he collected.

Mr. Brown when shown the order, pronounced the signature a forgery.

Foley was arraigned in court this morning for larceny, and another warrant will be issued against him for forgery.

The recount of the votes in this city for Representatives shows that the double system of counting the ballots ensures nearly absolute correctness. In a vote of 5,094 (three times the number of ballots cast) but five changes were made and three of these on questionable marks while the Ward officers counted and the recount committee did not. A question might be raised on the other two, whether the first or second count was correct. Of course the latter will stand as the official count, and yet it was made by single entry where the first count was by two sets of counters who agreed. Yet we are of the opinion that either system of counting would be satisfactory, and that recounts will always occur when a candidate is defeated by four votes. The recount showed the vote of the city to have been cast intelligently. One of the committee made the remark that he did not believe there was a better marked set of ballots in any city of the State.

It is also alleged that Foley presented an order to William A. Smith, a granite dealer, signed by W. E. Brown the undertaker, in favor of Arthur E. Foley for $8 which he collected.

Mr. Brown when shown the order, pronounced the signature a forgery.

AND HOW TO REACH IT.

OWING to the great amount of interest shown in the northwestern states, and especially in Montana and Washington, the Northern Pacific Railroad has prepared two folders, entitled "Golden Country" and "Fruitful Washington," which contain a great many interesting and valuable references to climate, topography, agriculture, stock-raising, mining, lumbering, government and railroad lands, and other subjects of interest to the capitalist, business man or settler. These folders can be obtained on application to the General Passenger Agent of the road.

It is the direct line to the Northwest that, among other things, the Northern Pacific Railroad offers the following advantages: It is the direct line to principal points in Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, and Washington; it has two trains daily to Helena and Butte, Montana; Spokane, Tacoma, Seattle, Washington; and Portland, Oregon. It has complete equipment of Pullman first-class sleeping, dining cars, day coaches, Pullman tourist and free colonist sleepers, the cars being new, comfortable and neat; it has through sleeping car service every day from Quincy, Ill., to Montana and the Coast points of Pullman first-class and tourist sleeping cars in connection with the Wisconsin Central, Lake and Superior, and Great Northern lines.

The service is complete in every respect, the "Yellowstone Park and Dining Car Route" being, in fact, a thorough-going tourist line.

District Passenger Agents of the Company will supply publications referred to above, with maps, time tables, rates, or other special information; or communications addressed to Charles E. Fee, G. P. & T. Office, St. Paul, Minn., will receive prompt attention.

SATURDAY, NOV. 14, 1891.

In November.

BY DUNCAN CAMPBELL SCOTT.

The ruddy sunset lies Banked along the west,
In locks with sweep and rise
The birds are going to rest.
The air sings and cools,
And the reds look gold
Standing above the pools
Like rods of beaten gold.
The flaunting golden-roed
Has lost her worldly mood,
She's given herself to God
And taken a nun's hood.
The wild and wanton horde
That kept the summer revel,
Have taken the serge and cord
And given the slip to the devil.
The winter's look somewhere,
Gathering snow for a fight;
From the feel of the air
I think it will freeze tonight.
—Scraper.

BAKED EGGS. Break the eggs into a well-buttered dish; add salt, pepper, bits of butter, two tablespoonsful of cream. Bake twenty minutes and serve. Butter muffs and lay them on a tin or dish having the bottom buttered. Break the eggs carefully and put one into each muff, sprinkle salt and pepper and put a bit of butter on the top of each, and then bake them in a moderately hot oven until the whites are set. They are more delicate than fried eggs.

By a recent decision of the post-office department, such mail matter as bank notices, school reports, tax returns, abstracts of title, assessment notices, price lists, and other like forms of correspondence, sent out partly in writing on printed blanks, viz., two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof. The only deviation from the strict letter of the rule is in the case of a printed circular, to which the law allows a special rate of one cent per ounce, provided it does not contain any of the printed matter in the body of the circular, of any written names, figures or any other characters. The above decision will interest many organizations and societies sending assessment notices.

POOK BILL. The poor McKinley bill.

What burdens of blame it has had to bear! It has been condemned for the mischief it would do, buffeted for the evil it did not do, howled at for the harm it ought to do, intended to do, cursed with equal fervor for putting prices up and for putting them down, and made to shoulder the blame for a large share of the misfortunes which have befallen the inhabitants of this broad land of which it is the near future, in spite of all this abuse the bill has been put in force and every one except the political groggers seems to be contented and happy. —Boston Home Journal.

ANECDOTES.

Major Brown had recently wounded the editor with a bullet from his rifle. In the last issue of the latter's paper the following notice appeared:—
"Major Brown was in town yesterday, and made a vigorous call. He made his mark on the town. Call again, Major—No. 64 City Cemetery. Omit flowers."

A North Side teacher was getting the new pupils tabulated.

"What does your father do?" she asked one of the new boys.

"He's a contractor," was the reply.

"A railway contractor?"

"No, ma'am, a sausage contractor. He ties up the ends after another man has filled 'em."

"Here, waiter, bring me a glass of whiskey."

"Lor, boss, dey ain't a drop o' whiskey in dis town. We's prohibition hyah, sah."

"Very well. Bring me a cup of tea."

"All right, sah! Bourbon or rye, boss."

"Is it far from him?" said a laboring man.

"No, ma'am, a sausage contractor. He ties up the ends after another man has filled 'em."

"Why?" rejoined the other scornfully, "he don't know enough about farmin' to plant 'is feet in the road and raise dust."

Mrs. Smith (to Mrs. Jones's servant girl) "What day was it?"

Servant girl—Mrs. Jones sends her regards, and says would you be so kind as to count your children and see if you haven't got too many, as our Kitty hasn't come home and school has been out two hours.

Gargyle—There's been a great improvement in medicine lately. For instance, doctors don't bleed patients as they used to.

Bloobumper—Don't they! Well, I paid doctor's bill of $400 only last week.

He (deeply smitten and trying hard to interest her)—Have you—any interest at all in this fact of collecting spoons?

She (wearily)—I'm trying to get rid of them.

Temperance.

Furnished for Publication by W. C. T. U.

After Election What?

"Election is over." The battle has been fought. The smoke is blowing away—what next? The conflict is not yet ended. It has only commenced. The one result of this campaign will only stimulate the friends of temperance to more systematic, persistent measures, until the liquor traffic be entirely suppressed. Looking to this end there must be a concentration of effort on the part of all suppressionists. On the one hand, temperance organizations must give themselves to more thorough and universal arousing of the people to recognize the crime of rum-selling and the sin of drunkenness, the danger of moderate drinking and the responsibility of the government and of each individual. Books, tracts, papers and leaflets must be faithfully and diligently circulated in every portion of the commonwealth, until the nature and tendency of the traffic and of intoxicating liquors is thoroughly understood, and in this work suppressionists can engage. On the other hand let the friends of suppression all over the commonwealth—no matter to what party they may belong—unite together in one strong, bold, energetic protest against the traffic, and let it be such a protest as to lay the axe to the root of the tree, a protest that shall manifest to the next Legislature that the friends of righteous government are not asleep, while a fiery flood is sweeping thousands of the citizens of the commonwealth on to destruction; that they do not look with unconcern at the emissaries of the saloon, carrying to our churches and our homes the deadly work of death.

The Poor Dyspeptic

With his Index Prohibitory, does not go far enough back in his inquiries. He is everlastingly thinking,
"What Can I Eat?" when his proper solicitude need only be, "How is it prepared?"
If food is prepared with COTTOLENE
the new vegetable substitute for Lard, all indigestible features are missing, anybody can obey Paul's injunction and eat what is set before him, asking no questions.
The proof of this is easy,
the result satisfactory. Convince yourself.
At leading grocers.
Now sound of scylla on the grass has ceased,
And reapers rest with a smile of ease,
Do we give thanks.
Not now at the feast alone,
But ever, from June till June,
While the harvest is bidden and blown,
By the glad thought of the heart in tune,
Do we give thanks.
For suns that mellow the fruit;
For strong, clean winds and the snows
Like a fold of fleece upon the roof
Of the oak, and the roof of the rose,
Do we give thanks.
For dew and for warm, soft rains,
That infuse new blood in the wood,
For the herb and vine that flushed the lands,
Through waving fields at the summer's flood
Do we give thanks.
For thrills on the line of nerves,
That leap in a quick response
To music's touch, and the thrill that serves
As the soul's applause to eloquence,
Do we give thanks.
For strength of the firm, little limbs,
And wealth of body and lung,
Deep reach of thought, and hope that skims
Like a bird, o'er heaven for light, with song,
Do we give thanks.
For vigor of brain and thought,
By reach of the sympathies,
By much well doing and pleasures wrought
By color of fields and flow of seas,
Do we give thanks.

Thanksgiving.
We look to the hills for rest;
For strength we turn to the sea:
For the boon of these, and fair bequest Of teeming lands to the seaways, we
With joy give thanks.
Best thanks for the favor is
The fullest of gift:
The pleasure expressed is song of praise,
And praise is a prayer whereby we thank Unceasing thanks.
Now at the time of the feast,
And of bursting granaries,
Now sound of scylla on the grass has ceased,
And reapers rest with a smile of ease,
Do we give thanks.
Not now at the feast alone,
But ever, from June till June,
While the harvest is bidden and blown,
By the glad thought of the heart in tune,
Do we give thanks.

Miscellany.
JACK.
"Good-night, Flossie. Don't forget to come. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving, you know!"
"Good-night, dear. Here, little boy, open the door for me, please. I shall be sure to come. Good-night!"
The carriage door closed with a sharp click, a pretty hand waved farewell from the top of the long flight of brown stone steps, and then the door closed, too, leaving a small, desperately ragged figure standing alone on the sidewalk.
Gingham! said Jack. Then, he looked lastly over his shoulder, up the house and down the street, and trotted, rags and all, to the lamp-post at the corner.
"Gingham!" said Jack again, holding up a shining coin to the light. "Gingham!"
"Was too small for a cent? A dollar, yes!"
he opened an "alibi" that does! What?
I do so! Theatres are begun, and the spellers! More'n I made sellin' Travellers for three days. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving," he said. I wish I had a grandy down here. Presently he raised himself up on one foot, but sank to the ground again,
catching his breath.
"Say, mister!" he tried to call out to
the little light dancing off down the road.
But his voice sounded uncommonly weak
and faint, and he gave up the attempt.
He was quivering so that the words wouldn't seem to come right.
"Seems 'f the might come out, Mr. St.
John," he thought, with a big lump in his throat.
He looked about him. Right beside the railroad was a belt of trees, and beyond that there seemed to be an open space.
"Praps he lives 'round here, somewhere," said Jack wearily; "or somebody's gran'mother."
He looked at himself, limped painfull-ly to the fence, and crawled under it.
Crawling seemed to be easier than walking,
so he kept on that way, uttering a little
"Oh!" now and then as his bruised feet struck a root, and glancing about him with a sense of loneliness that only a city boy alone in the country, however, can know.
Pretty soon, he came out on the open field he had seen. The ground seemed rougher than ever, and was covered with stiff, bristly stalks, three or four inches high. Some kind of tough vines squirmed about among the hillocks like so many snakes, and entangled themselves in his hands and feet. Jack began to have a strange, sick feeling come over him.
"Makes a feller feel awful dizzy, jest rappin' his foot a little," said he. Then,
"Wish I'd spent ten cents for a supper," said Jack. "If I thought he would come by what I want, I'd lookin' I'd jest lay my head down on it, on' shut my eyes for a minute."
"Gingham, ain't it cold!" he added, after a pause; "and hungry! It's the hungriest place I ever saw."
He shivered a little, curled up his toes
as far as possible, laid his hat over the hole in his trousers that seemed to let in the most cold, drew his hands up inside his ragged sleeves, and laid his head upon the "yellow watermelon."
The ache inside grew bigger and bigger,
and he couldn't keep from seeing things, even with his eyes shut tight. He had a strange notion that his head was large and yellow like his pillow, and sometimes one was on top, sometimes the other. Among the sharp November wind, sweeping down from the hills-top, dropped a flake or two of feathery snow on the silent, grey heap; and they were not shaken off. Jack did not shiver any more, but moaned faintly now and then, and started uneasily as his toes, uncaring in his sleep, touched the frozen ground.
An hour later, a column of blue smoke issued from the chimney of an old grey farmhouse told of a brave fire below.
And a wonderful fire it was.
Built of pine splits and well-seasoned kindlings, it roared and laughed by turns, dancing all the time, and now taking a run up the sooty chimney, now mischievously sending a puff of smoke right out into the room. What a warm and genial fire it was too! "I am perfectly aware that I am not indeed merely for ornament," it seemed to say, "but I have a good day's work before me. These big rooms to warm (with possibly some babies' toes, in o' the bargain, when the folk arrive), two barrels to brown, no end of potatoes and squash and goodies to cook to a turn; and, at night, nuts to crack, and the old kitchen to keep warm and a bright—but not too bright—at the same time."
Just at this point, the fire's soliloquy was interrupted by the approach of a quaint, old man, with a long white beard, dressed in a blue and white striped shirt, yellow floor, with a mingled uproar of shouts and capers.
"Grandma, where'd you put the doughnuts?"
"O grandma, just one before breakfast!"
"Hooray for Thanksgiving!"
"Breakfast most ready?"
"I'm not going to eat much, are you?
Save in for dinner!"
"There, there, boys," says grandma,
"there's a doughnut apiece. Now run out and get the fresh air, like good chickens.
And don't forget to give Bessie and Tim a good breakfast of lay, with a little corn and a couple of apples thrown in for Thanksgiving."
Away they go, through the old porch,
and out into the cold, crisp air.
"Say, let's go down in the lower field, by the railroad, and slide!" And they are out of sight before you could turn this page over.
Grandma went about the kitchen with a quiet smile, and the many cheerful hands and strong young arms that obeyed her directions made light work of the important business of the day. Rows of glistening squash pies appeared in the cupboard, when the door was opened, and were hunged along the wall for instant use.
Heaps of apple and cranberry sauce shed their spicy odors in the kitchen. Wooden trays resounded with the vigorous blows of the chopping-knife, and nutmegs tore up and down over the grates till the custards had all received a delicate brown powdering from the nutmeg grater.
The cat rattled and swayed on its long journey, and the little grimy feet dangled out and fro. The conductor passed again and again, with a kindly glance at the worn human-bitten face and the small, parched hands, which were huddled together in his lap from long habit of sleeping in the cold. Faster and faster went the express train, under gloomy pine forests, over bridges and through bridges, screaming dimly out into the night, and finding its way farther and farther into the country.
Suddenly, Jack felt a hand rudely laid on his shoulder.
"Wake up there, young feller, wake up!"
cried a rough voice; "the conductor says you must get off here, and the bell ringing to start. You're 'way beyond Portland!"
Jack picked up his hat which had fallen to the floor, and, not yet half awake, staggered sleepily after the conductor. Just as they reached the platform, the train started with a jerk.
"Jump, quick!" shouted the brakeman.
Poor little Jack. He did jump quick, and alighted with his tender bare feet upon an irregular heap of rusty iron rails, beside the track. In a moment more the train rumbled past him and was gone. The station-master had already locked his doors, and was hurrying home with his lantern. The black night closed in thickly overhead, and was very still. Jack lay quietly on his side for five, ten, fifteen minutes. Then he stirred, and moaned a little. Presently he raised himself up on one foot, but sank to the ground again,
catching his breath.
"Say, mister!" he tried to call out to
the little light dancing off down the road.
But his voice sounded uncommonly weak
and faint, and he gave up the attempt.

To Be Hung.

Frank C. Almy, the murderer of Christie Warden, was carried to Plymouth, N. H., on Monday, where he pleaded guilty to the murder. On Tuesday his trial commenced and continued through Wednesday and Thursday. After dinner on Thursday the clerk read the decision of the judges, which was murder in the first degree. The decision gave general satisfaction, and there was immense expression of joy in the court room, which was shown by cheers and stamping. Almy had been previously removed and was on his way to prison.

It is a relief, says the Boston Journal, that the trial is ended. As to the sentence that has been passed upon this self-confessed murderer there can be no two opinions. If ever the death penalty were justified in the sight of God and man it is so in this instance. The crime was one of the foulest description, and the whole course of the evidence has been to deepen the popular detestation for the criminal. It is to be hoped that the sentence will be further demonstrations of mankind's sentiment in his behalf. Almy is under sentence to be hanged in the prison yard in Concord on the first Tuesday of December, 1892.

The World's Convention.

The most notable Convention ever held in Boston, was that which met in Tremont Temple during the past week. The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union opened its first session at 9 A. M., Nov. 14th, and its meetings continued with unabated interest, and the last moment of the closing session, Wednesday afternoon.

To those who were privileged to attend, was an inspiration, simply to look upon the vast throng of earnest, thoughtful, Christian women, gathered in the interest of the most important cause which is occupying the public mind at the present day. Not only was the large audience room of Tremont Temple packed to overflowing, so that in many instances, even ticket holders were unable to obtain seats, but the overflow meetings in Broadway and Park street churches were equally crowded; and those who had failed to obtain even standing room in the Temple, were addressed by some of the finest speakers in the organization.

Lady Henry Somerset, President of the British Women's Christian Temperance Union, was one of the most attractive features of the Convention. Of noble birth, and inheriting immense wealth, she early became imbued with the principles of Christianity and devoted her life to the work of rescuing and elevating the poorer classes among her own people. Seeing that much of the misery was caused by the demon of drink she was led to consecrate herself and her abundant means to the eradicating of that fearful evil, which has destroyed so many homes. Wherever she has spoken, her sweet, strong face and earnest, graceful words have completely fascinated her hearers. On Sunday afternoon she preached in Tremont Temple, and the large audience, from Boston and throughout the world, who came to listen to her, Wednesday afternoon she spoke to an immense audience of men in Park street church. Her visit to this country will ever be a pleasant memory to those who were privileged to look upon her face. She is soon to start upon a tour of two years' duration, to carry the petition for prohibition to the different governments of the world.

For the first time in the history of our nation the white ribbon of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union have been permitted to clasp hands with the delegates from kindred organizations from all parts of the world, and to form themselves into one vast Union known as the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, who, in the past eight years has visited every country of the globe except South America, (for which she is soon to depart) and established local Unions in nearly every place where she has been, was not the least conspicuous among the speakers.

Miss Frances E. Willard, whose unexampled success and popularity as President of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and now also of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is too well known to need any word of commendation. It was inspiring to see her preside at any one of the great sessions of the Convention. She is simply Frances E. Willard. May she long be spared to hold the position she now occupies, and for which she is so admirably fitted.

But if possible, the cream of the meetings was in the after dinner speeches, at the banquet held in honor of our distinguished guests, on Monday evening. Music hall, where a thousand guests listened to addresses under the direction of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore as Toastmistress. Among the speakers were Rev. A. A. Miner, Rev. A. J. Gordon, Edward Everett Hale, Ex-Governor John D. Long, George T. Wilbur of New Brunswick, Miss Joseph Cook, Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and our townsmen, Mr. Henry H. Faxon. He said "deeds mean donations." It certainly lived with him, as he had already generously presented to the Convention an actual gift of twenty-five hundred dollars. At the close of the exercises the delegates joined hands and all sang "Blest be the tie that binds." It was a treat never to be forgotten.

The influence of such a gathering as has been held in Tremont Temple cannot be estimated. It can only be for good; and those who have listened to the stirring reports, of these indefatigable workers in the field of temperance, have felt in their hearts kindly words of sympathy and have desired more heartily to unite with them in banishing the demon of intemperance from our land.

In the Sunny South.

Rev. D. M. Wilson, of this city, who is in New Orleans for a few weeks, has been much interested in the Louisiana lotteries. He was present at one of the drawings where he saw, in a very few minutes, a $300,000 prize, and many smaller ones, drawn and paid. But the drawers were few and the multitude of disappointed faces was sad to look upon. A few evenings before the drawings he attended an enormous demonstration against the lotteries. It was an outdoor affair. There was a band and there were speeches by eminent men, one of them the leader of the crowd which broke into the drawings and killed the Italians. The ladies, he says, are particularly interested in the suppression of the lotteries, and their handkerchiefs waved "like froth on a stormy sea."

G. A. R. Fair.

The Grand Army Fair at Hancock hall is meeting with good success, as is certainly deserved. The money spent is being put into the Post charity fund, and is used to help the needy soldier. For this reason, it is pleasant to know that our citizens are willing and desirous to help in the worthy work of the G. A. R. boys. By request, the fair will be open on Saturday afternoon—admission, ten cents.

Hingham. Mrs. Lucy, widow of Henry Nye of Hingham, celebrated the 92d anniversary of her birth at the residence of her step son, Mr. Henry Nye, on Tuesday last. She received many calls from relatives and other friends and was made the recipient of numerous presents as mementoes of the occasion. She retains her faculties and takes much interest in what is going on in the outside world.

The Registers of Voters met Wednesday and registered sixteen voters, making thirty-eight in the State election.

Desmond Bros., who have been employed by J. R. Wild as blacksmiths, have bought out Curley's shop on Quincy avenue.

Frank C. Packard's residence is being improved in appearance by the painter's brush. Hayward Bros. are the artists.

Teachers in the Hopkinton schools have been instructed to visit the Quincy schools with a view to introducing our methods there.

The high wind of Tuesday played havoc with the telephone lines, and many of them were not in working order Wednesday.

The interment of Mr. George W. Kelley, formerly of this city, who died at Lynn Saturday, took place at Mount Wollaston cemetery Monday.

Rev. Edward Norton preached an excellent sermon Sunday morning at the appropriate to Hospital Sunday, and a collection amounting to $63 was taken.

William R. Tyler, one of the candidates of the Democrats in Ward One for Councilman, has resigned and James T. Pennington has accepted the nomination.

Six candidates joined the Granite Commandery, Golden Cross, on Wednesday evening. Delegates from Boston and Highland commanderies were present.

There will be a Union service in the chapel of the Congregational church on Thanksgiving day at 11 A. M. Subject, "Home." All are most cordially invited.

Susan Hartney, (ex Thomas W.) has sold to Hannah M. Dingman, land and buildings on the west side of private way leading from Granite street, Quincy, for $1,600.

Friends of Councilman Newcomb, the former at Church & Hitchcock's, are pushing him forward in the contest for the gold-braid case offered at the Grand Army fair.

George H. Brown, one of the nominees of the Republicans for Councilman-at-large in his twenty-second year. He is a well-known business man, however, and a "hustler."

In the Congregational Chapel, Sunday evening, Mr. Edward Southworth, Mr. Theophilus King and the pastor, spoke to the young men. Their remarks were very interesting.

An entertainment and social will be given at Granite Commandery No. 26, P. F. Y. B. O. at regular meeting Wednesday evening, Nov. 25.

The new brick sidewalk on the north side of City hall will make the street rather narrow, but there are one hundred who walk to one who rides, and heretofore they have had to take many chances.

A horse attached to Garriety's express wagon became frightened Tuesday night while standing in front of Hodges' bakery, and ran down Hancock street, between by Cottage avenue to its stable.

Sometime during Monday night parties on mischief entered the store yard of McKenney & Parsons on Court street, and pushed over a block of granite which stood on one end which fell on two sties damaging them to the extent of about $60.

Several of the houses at Hough Neck have been entered and robbed of furnishings. The pleasant weather has been quite inviting to thieves to visit this place and enter the houses. One man reports the loss of a nice rug.

Palmer's Operatic Minstrels are coming to Quincy next week. They give one of their laughable entertainments at Robertson hall on Thanksgiving day, Nov. 26. Reserved tickets are for sale at E. B. Southworth's news store.

George and Fannie Wells children of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Wells of Newcomb street, had a double birthday party Monday evening, entertaining about thirty-five young friends. Master George was presented with a game and Miss Fannie with a gold ring.

There will be a game of football on the Greenleaf street grounds on Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock. All those who desire to play are requested to be on hand before 9 o'clock, as there is to be a lecture and a regular game of thirty minutes ball will be played.

A generous subscription to the fountain has been received from Mr. John R. Graham. The committee expects to dedicate the fountain Tuesday next. Notice will be given in local papers. Those "last" dollars are needed here, as there is but a clock to be drawn and the society lacks a few dollars. It is expected this week will finish the work of collecting.

Nineteen of the present Councilmen have been renominated. It doesn't look much as though there would be a smaller percentage of old members than usual, especially as majority (twelve) are as good as elected. The four who would not seek renomination and with possibly one exception declined to accept, are Messrs. Drake, Jones, Roberts and Wilde.

The four days' fair of the Swedish Lutheran church opened auspiciously Wednesday evening. There was an impromptu entertainment singing by the choir, solos and dialogues and instrumental solos. There was a table of fancy articles, a book table, fishing pond, grab box, and other attractions, including several voting and guessing contests. Refreshments were served.

The dance held at Faxon hall, Thursday night, by the Universalist Ladies' Association, was well attended, there being thirty couples in the grand march and several more came later. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening and was very refreshing after the many dances. All enjoyed themselves so much that the ladies have concluded to give another in about three weeks.

Swifth Brothers of this city have erected this week, at Mount Wollaston cemetery, a beautiful sarcophagus to the memory of our late postmaster, Samuel Henry Spear. It is of one block of Western granite; four finely polished panels, with rustic border. The size is three feet five inches by five feet four inches and weighs six tons. It is somewhat different from anything ever erected in this beautiful cemetery.

SOUTH QUINCY.

John Milne of South Quincy sailed Wednesday for Glasgow on the Teutonic from New York.

The Quincy Patriot.

A Successful Administration.

Mayor Fairbank's administration, which is just drawing to a close, has been a remarkably successful one. When Mr. Fairbank was nominated by the Republicans, last year, the old silver tops were his heads and said that he was "too young to make a practical and successful Mayor."

But the record which has been spread before us from day to day shows that their prophecy has not been fulfilled.

Mr. Fairbanks, in taking up the reins of the city government, had an almost unsurmountable task before him. The Willard schoolhouse was in a state of chaos. One of the Mayor's first acts was the appointment of W. W. Ewell as Commissioner of Public Works. This appointment was immediately followed up by the taking possession of the Willard schoolhouse in the name of the city of Quincy, the contractors having failed and work on it having come to a standstill. Steps were immediately taken to complete the building. The amount remaining in the treasury of the sum already appropriated was $32,750, and $10,000 more was needed to push the building to a rapid completion.

The Mayor took possession of the building on Jan. 16, and on Jan. 19, he had Councilman Moxon present orders to the Council asking for $10,000. The schoolhouse, under the direction of Commissioner Ewell and to terminate the employment of the Messrs. Cushing. The Council so ordered and the schoolhouse was finished and dedicated in a few months time.

In his other appointments Mayor Fairbanks did not confine himself to the Republican party. City Treasurer Adams, City Solicitor Hayes and Principal Assessor Pope are Democrats, and leaders in that party.

About a month after Mr. Fairbanks had been in office he became convinced that a police officer should be on duty at or around City Hall, day times, to attend to all the city business such as serving warrants, notifying jurors, court business, etc., and Deputy Manager Langley was put on permanent duty and paid three dollars per day for his services. Although this duty was criticised at the time it is now conceded by many to have been a wise move.

In June the management of the city of Quincy was placed in the hands of a new time-table and that this time-table would deprive Quincy of some of its principal trains. Mayor Fairbanks immediately waited upon General Manager Kendrick and as the representative of the people of Quincy, asked for additional trains, and at the citizens' meeting which was held on June 13, at Hancock hall, he read a communication from Superintendent Allen of the Old Colony in which the management said, "referring to our convenience of this afternoon."

It is found, after a fair trial of the new time-table, more trains are necessary, we will be very glad to confer with you with a view of adding a few more Quincy expresses."

This communication was backed up a few weeks later by the addition of eight more trains to the time-table.

The Mayor was also instrumental in having workmen's tickets placed on sale at the Quincy Adams, Quincy, Wollaston and Atlantic depots.

The appointment of Commissioner Ewell by the Mayor was a peculiarly fortunate one. Commissioner Ewell has proved himself more than equal to the multitudinous duties of the office. His business-like methods in the administration of the street and highway department have saved the city thousands of dollars. His most noteworthy work was the rebuilding of Washington street, which was put in excellent condition at a small outlay and vouches for his energy and skill as a public administrator.

Another important work which has been accomplished by Commissioner Ewell is the cleaning out of all the brooks in the city. For years these brooks have been allowed to run, causing loss and distress to the owners of land through which they ran.

Fatal Shooting.

The beautiful Thanksgiving day had a sad ending; a South Quincy young man, meeting an accidental death by shooting.

The South Quincy Gun club held a shoot at its range off Centre street, Thanksgiving afternoon. Everything had gone smoothly and the members were picking up their traps when a shot was fired from a Daniel Dorian was accidentally discharged, the ball, a .44 calibre, entering the back of Arthur Scott, and passing through the liver and the lower part of the left lung came out at the chest. Tender hands lifted the unfortunate man and carried him to the residence of his brother, John C. Scott at No. 7 Tottman street. Medical aid was also summoned, but when the physician arrived the young man had expired.

Walter Thayer, one of the members of the club, who was present when the accident occurred, was seen by a PATRIOT reporter and told the following story: The shooting was finished and Scott was on his hands and knees picking up his ammunition. Daniel Dorian who had been off in the woods gunning game by and handed his rifle, which was a Winchester repeater to Hugh Owens, who discharged it at the target and then handed it back to Dorian, who held it in his hands looking at it. The muzzle being very close to the target, who was five feet away. Suddenly it was discharged, the ball passing through the unfortunate man who fell over and then arose to his feet and fell into Thayer's arms exclaiming, "Oh I'm dead." He was immediately carried home, but died as he reached the door.

Hugh Owens' story is practically the same as Thayer's. Owens said it was nearly four o'clock and Dorian had the rifle in his hands and was moving a cartridge when it was discharged.

It seems with this kind of a rifle in order to remove a cartridge a lever must be pulled back at the same time cocks it, and it is presumed that the lever must have slipped in his hand and flying back exploded.

Arthur Scott the victim of the accident is about twenty-six years old and unmarried. He was a carpenter by trade and was very popular with his associates, all of whom speak of him in the kindest of words and his untimely death has cast a shadow of gloom upon one and all. He was an honored member of Clan McGregor, O. S. C., and was foremost in their sports and a hard worker in anything that would tend to help and encourage his fellow-man.

Wollaston Politics.

There is a new move on foot in Wollaston politics.

It has always been the custom at the Ward Five Republican club caucuses to reorganize by acclamation the Councilmen who have served the past year, and to also pass resolutions endorsing the work which they have done at the Council.

As every voter knows, who has followed the Council meetings through the columns of the LEDGER and PATRIOT, Wollaston has been represented by three able men, who have dared to stand up and fight for the best interests of the city, and foremost among them was Councilman Roberts, who made a strong fight against the $40,000 brick schoolhouse at South Quincy.

There seemed to be but little doubt but what all three of the Councilmen would be re-elected, but the Councilmen, who are fully cognizant of the ability, integrity and zeal which our present Councilmen of Public Works has shown during his administration.

It is not only my right, but also my duty, to speak emphatically in relation to the Candidacy of Mr. Hodges.

In battling for the greatest reform that ever blessed the citizens of Quincy I have been met by a persistent opponent that the man who is now the Democratic candidate for mayor. For the past ten years he has exerted his great political influence to encourage the saloon element rather than to promote the interests of the taxpayers and law-abiding citizens.

Very few are aware of the stumbling blocks which were placed in my path to hinder me in enforcing the liquor laws. For years my appointment, as special officer, for this work, was persistently opposed by Mr. Hodges, contrary to the wishes of all except those who desired to perpetuate the dram shop for the purpose of debauching and cursing those who had no inclination, or who lacked strength of character to resist the temptation of the evil.

It is strange that some men are so bound to party that they cannot see honesty or virtue unless it be within their own political clique or organization.

Independent Voters, determined to act only for the right, can overcome any party machine, and elect the man who is best qualified to represent the people.

I believe that my acts in public affairs must have convinced my fellow-citizens that I love for party has not stifled my convictions. The voters of Quincy owe it to the cause which I am proud to represent to repudiate any man who, as an official, has stubbornly resisted the advancement of a reform which so substantially promotes the prosperity of our municipality as does the prohibition of the sale of the vilest of liquors.

Other addresses will be made by Rev. D. H. Elia and Rev. Charles Shatt of Boston, and by Rev. J. H. Yeoman of Atlantic.

Mr. Charles F. Merrick, master of Quincy school, will preside.

The regular Sunday evening services of the churches will be omitted in order that all may attend the no-license meeting in Music hall.

H. H. Faxon on City Issues.

Henry H. Faxon contributes an open letter on municipal affairs, which, as usual, is outspoken and characteristic of the gentleman:

To the Editors of the Patriot:

The two most important matters to be considered at the approaching municipal election are the vote on the question of granting licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors and the election of a Mayor who will reappoint our present efficient Commissioner of Public Works.

It seems impossible that anyone would deny that the blessings resulting from No License during the past ten years have exceeded the expectations of the most ardent friends of law and order, and I believe there can be no serious doubt as to the value of the city upon this vital question.

Regarding the Commissioner of Public Works, I am impelled to say that the faithful, untiring industry and skillful management which this official has displayed in the discharge of his many perplexing duties should leave no uncertainty in the minds of our citizens as to the desirability of his re-appointment.

Thousand of Dollars Have Been Saved to the city during the year by the efficiency and sound judgment of Mr. Ewell. The experience of the past in having important men to fill one of the most important offices of the city has been persistently opposed by Mr. Hodges, contrary to the wishes of all except those who desired to perpetuate the dram shop for the purpose of debauching and cursing those who had no inclination, or who lacked strength of character to resist the temptation of the evil.

It is not only my right, but also my duty, to speak emphatically in relation to the Candidacy of Mr. Hodges.

Our Shade Trees.

The manner in which the shade trees on the streets of Quincy are being used by men engaged in putting up wires for different companies, is simply disgraceful; they not only cut and slash the limbs of trees, but they mutilate them with spikes attached to their bodies, tearing and disfiguring the bark, causing the sap to run in streams down the trunk, and when spoken to by outraged abusers, giving them to understand they shall do as they please.

As a sample of the work, see trees near the residence of Mr. D. Underwood on Hancock street and in numerous other places.

It is gratifying to know that our Commissioner of Public Works has taken measures to put a stop to this style of cutting and slashing trees. At my residence on Franklin street in said Quincy I shall offer for sale to the highest bidder, at public auction, the aforesaid right in equity of redemption to satisfy said execution and all fees and charges of sale.

Harvest Festival.

The annual harvest festival of the First church was held in the chapel Sunday evening, an unusually large audience attending, every seat being taken so that many of the late arrivals were obliged to stand.

The stage was set as a barn scene and was very appropriately trimmed. Around the walls were hung clusters of apples, pumpkins, onions and seed corn; on either side of the front of the platform was a sheaf of corn stalks. Upon the floor was a lot of hay, large baskets of ripe checked apples, golden onions, newly husked corn, and piles of pumpkins and squashes, and taking it all in all, it was indeed a pretty harvest scene.

The exercises consisted of recitations and singing, mostly by the younger scholars, the little tots reciting the pieces remarkably well.

More Locomotives and Cars.

The Directors of the Old Colony Railroad have contracted with the Manchester, (N. H.) Locomotive Works to build for the road ten standard passenger locomotives. The drawings and specifications are all furnished by the Old Colony, and the engines will be similar to the largest in the passenger service of the road. By rebuilding some of our engines, the road expects to have eighteen more locomotives ready for service at the opening of next summer's business than it has had the past season.

Although during the past two years over fifty new passenger cars and nearly 400 freight cars have been added to the equipment of the road, the supply is not enough. The Wason Manufacturing Company of Springfield has contracted to build thirty-five first-class passenger coaches during this winter, and contracts have also been made for 100 freight cars.

The entire cost of the new equipment will be upward of $350,000.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council has held its last meeting previous to the municipal election. The session on Monday night was attended by 20 members, Councilmen Drake, Rinn, and Wagoner being absent. The most important business transacted was the passage to be ordered of the order of $30,000 to be of the order of $30,000, and this was not easily accomplished.

Water Street Opinion.

City Solicitor relates that a bombshell at the enthusiasts on widening Water street. He had been asked by the Council to give his opinion if the Committee on Streets had proceeded in a legal manner in every particular in the order and the method of the laying out of Water street to forty-five feet, as reported by the Committee on Streets in their order on Nov. 11, 1891.

The Solicitor says the order as reported does contain some irregularities which, though in the present probably not sufficient to invalidate the proceedings, are objectionable features and should be corrected. He instanced the blank left for cost, the want of a description of the land to be taken, the elimination of the reference to the City Council, a definite order for abutting owners to remove fences, and he was uncertain as to whether the Council could widen street at crossing. In closing he said "the wise and safe course to pursue in the interest of the city, would be to rescind the order, and to institute entirely new proceedings in the premises."

Upon motion of Councilman Jones the communication was received and placed on file.

Under undisturbed business the order appropriating $11,292.36 came up. An amendment was pending to make the amount $41,292.36, which would be sufficient to complete the work.

Councilman Bryant wished to withdraw his amendment, when he was moved to rescind the order to the Committee on Streets.

Councilman Jones had no objection to Councilman Bryant, but thought the City Solicitor had offered no suggestions as to how the order might be amended. He was very critical of the City Solicitor, saying he did not believe him capable of drafting a legal order. The opinion rendered gave no information, but said it might be so, and it might not.

Councilman Bryant thought the final clause of the opinion defective; it stating that new proceedings should be instituted. Believed that the Committee and City Solicitor in conference could draft an order which would be legal.

Councilman Moxon thought as the City Solicitor had done nothing to rectify the order it would be useless to recommend.

Councilman Warner said recommending would only delay matters. If order must be rescinded now was the time to do so.

Noted to recommend. Councilman Jones doubted the vote, and certification proved 5 to have voted yes and 14 nay.

Councilman Bryant's amendment was decided withdrawn at the request of a motion of Councilman Moxon to lay on the table pending.

Upon motion of Councilman Moxon the opinion of the City Solicitor was taken from the file and referred to the Committee on Streets.

President Thompson ruled the point well taken.

Brook Appropriation.

The Committee on Drains reported an order for a transfer of $100 from the enforcement of the liquor laws to the appropriation for Town and Sachem brooks. It was passed to be engrossed.

A motion to suspend the rules that the order might be put on its final passage was opposed by Councilman Pratt. He objected to its passage before it had been referred to the Committee on Finance, and opposed taking from the liquor appropriation.

The Council refused to reconsider the rules.

Copeland Street Drain.

The Committee on Drains reported an order for the laying out of Copeland street at this time. Report accepted.

Licenses.

The Committee on Licenses reported orders granting a license to Robert C. Davis for Robertson hall, and to Samuel Gilpatrick a common victualler's license. Adopted.

Hydrants.

Upon motion of Councilman Roberts, Orders 25 and 27 were taken from the table, and referred to the Committee on Fire Department. They are for hydrants on Beale street and Stanton avenue.

Election Returns.

Upon motion of Councilman Bass the Committee on Elections was instructed to meet Dec. 1 to receive the returns of the election.

Adjournment Fixed.

Upon motion of Councilman Sherman it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be to Wednesday evening, Dec. 9. Voted at 9:25 to adjourn.

Marriages.

Thanksgiving inaugurated a boom in the matrimonial as well as the turkey market. Here is a good record for Wednesday:

Corcoran-Callahans.

St. John's church was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday, the contracting parties being Miss Mary Callahan of this city and Mr. Timothy Corcoran of Brockton, formerly of this place. Miss Margaret Callahan a sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Michael Corcoran of the groom, performed the office of best man. The bride was attired in a dress of pale lavender with trimmings of gold lace, as was also the bridesmaid.

After the ceremony the happy couple repaired to the residence of the bride's father, 24 Quincy avenue, where a wedding breakfast was held, and where also a reception was held in the evening from eight until ten. Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran received very many handsome and valuable presents from their many friends who wish them success in their new life.

Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran will reside in Brockton.

Moriarty-Moore.

St. Mary's church was the scene of two weddings Wednesday. The first which was solemnized at 8 o'clock was by Rev. Fr. Coffey, and was the marriage of Mr. Michael Moriarty and Miss Ellen Moore. Mr. Luke Moriarty was best man and Miss Mary Moore was bridesmaid. The bride and bridesmaid wore costumes of pale pink china silk. Mr. and Mrs. Moriarty will reside on Common street.

Drohan-O'Connell.

The second wedding was at 9 o'clock and was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Coffey. The contracting parties being Mr. Edward Drohan, formerly of Hoxe 3, and Miss Annie O'Connell. Councilman William F. Powers was best man and Miss Lizzie O'Connell, bridesmaid. The bride and bridesmaid wore costumes of white dotted muslin and carried a bunch of white chrysanthemums.

Work of Vandals.

Mrs. R. D. Bumstead has reported to Constable Fernald that her summer residence at New Bedford, which she had rented by a lease to the late Mrs. E. F. Drohan, was damaged by fire at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday evening to the extent of $1,500. The whole Milton department was called out.

READ! MARK! LEARN!
—AND—INWARDLY DIGEST.
Life and health depend upon wholesome digestible food. Food to be easily digested must be properly prepared. This means good cooking, and a good cook must have healthful fine flavored materials. People are everywhere availing to the importance of greater care in the selection of food materials.

TAKE THE LEAD
Among cooking materials, because pies, biscuits, and pastry are better flavored, more delicious and more nutritious than food prepared with animal fat. Welcome to the "Rising Sun Stove Polish" such as potatoes, eggs, fish, mush, honey, etc., etc.

Everybody knows that vegetable food is, in the long run, far more readily assimilated by the digestion than animal products.

COTTOLENE
is essentially a vegetable preparation and is guaranteed to be a

Our Debts.
My last debt is paid, said man, as he laid
A bill on his desk he had settled that day;
But pause, my good friend for some people contend
There are debts, many debts, dollars never can pay.
Kind sir, is it so; have you paid all you owe
To the parents who reared you with such tender care?
For debts small and great that you owed church and State,
Have you, sir, the receipts filed away anywhere?
And how of the debts that life's pathway beast,
Due to children and wife, to friends far and near?
To pay them outright has it been your delight?
If not, that you still are in debt is quite clear.
How, too, of the claims that society makes
As due from all who live under her sway?
Can you with truth state they are settled today?
If not then you are a poor debtor today.
With truth we are told, though the young or the old
To pay all their debts may toil, struggle and sweat,
The great and the small, high and low, one and all,
Die as they were born—a long, long way in debt.

Miscellany.
KETURAH'S OMEN.
Mrs. Totten sat before the fire with an open letter in her hands.
"I am going to Burdett tonight, John,"
she said, decisively. "I gather from this that Mary must be quite sick."
"Yes, I think myself that's what you'd better do, mother," answered Farmer Totten.
Ruth looked up from her stocking-basket. "Is it a long drive to Burdett?"
she said, glancing with a look of concern, at her mother's tired face. "It seems too bad to have you go tonight, mother."
"Oh, I wasn't thinking of that. It bothers me most to think of leaving
"Turah and you here alone all night, though really there is no danger. Is Silas coming up, "Turah?"
"No, he ain't!" came sharply and currently from the pantry. Any mention of Silas always vexed Keturah.
"Well, then, Ruth, I'll stop in at the Maymoods and ask the girls to come up and sleep with us. They are all three and three, and you can pop corn and boil candy and have a regular frolic.
That'll take the edge of your loneliness.
Now, go, you go out and hitch up, and I'll be ready in a few minutes."
It alone, Ruth drew close to the fire and resumed her darning. The furniture cast shadows over the yellow-paneled floor.
Taddy executed a series of noiseless yawns, which made him look more like a griffin than a cat. Through the window a long bar of deep orange light was fading slowly on the distant horizon. The clock-ticks became peculiarly distinct.
Ruth's needle stopped its swift weaving, and she stared dreamily into a corner. A noise in the battery startled her. It was only Keturah putting up the milkpans, but something in the vigorous clank and hospelous agitation on the part of that eccentric handmaid.
At length the battery door opened, and Keturah appeared on the threshold. Her long, sorrow face wore a particularly sad and gloomy expression, and the glance she cast on Ruth was portentous.
"I don't like it, your ma takin' this trip tonight."
"Why, "Turah?"
"Well, while I was a-milkin' I see seven crows flyin' up from Seneca, and to begin with, that's a bad number. Then, to make it moreartin, they flew in zigzag across this house, and that argues that something unfortuna'e is bound to happen here tonight.
The silence seemed to grow deeper, and Ruth stirred uneasily in her chair.
"Nonsense, "Turah! Seven crows flyin' up from the lake are not at all unusual. I don't believe in your signs."
"Well, you hain't lived as long as me, an' seen as many of 'em come true. The very night my father died my mother see the white death-horse peerin' in at the window, waitin' to carry him off."
Ruth's involuntary glance out into the gathering darkness was not lost on Ke-turah.
"And the night my uncle Eph died the clock struck the shadder of a coffin two hours before any of 'em expected him to die. And the day before Aunt Sallie died all her bees swarmed and left their hives, and hung round her five minutes in front of her bedroom window before they left the farm. It's plain to see, Ruth, ye hain't had the proper experience in signs to judge of 'em."
"But the great sign of all," Keturah continued, beginning to lay the supper-table, "was when Hank Loomis died over to Sugar Hill. Ever hear of that? Ye hain't? Well, I wonder!"
"Hank was a terrible sinner. He just drunked himself straight to the edge of the grave, and the summer afternoon he laid a-strugglin' with death. Deacon Brown urged him to repent, but he wouldn't. Says he, 'I'll die as I've lived, an' you git out!'"
"Three o'clock in the afternoon the door stood open, an' it was so hot the doorway flowers toppled over on their stems and hung still. Suddenly there came a sound like a long, cold blast of wind.
Everybody felt the chill. It howled unmistakably, and the day-away moon made them shudder down their spines. Fol-lowin' it came three soundin' raps on the back knocker. They were awful!"
"Hank's sister Belinda, she crept out and pecked over the banisters, an' there was the hall empty, an' not a livin' soul in sight high or low. Jest then Hank give a gasp an' a groan, an' up an' died. Want to go down sular with me for the victim?"

Ruth hesitated and shivered.
"Yes, I'll go, "Turah, but I don't want to hear of another omen tonight. I'm gettin' nervous."
The cellar was dark and gloomy. Ruth held the lamp while Keturah took down the necessary odds from the swinging shelf. The return to the warm, cosy kitchen was exceedingly pleasant. Ruth saw her supper sitting opposite Keturah, and speculating on the nature of omens in general, while Keturah discoursed volubly of her wonderful "knack for pre-sentiments."

"And I feel sure," she declared, over her fourth cup of tea, "that them crows meant trouble here tonight."
The sound of wheels and voices outside came a quick, bright turn towards Belle Kitty and Grace Maywood came rushing into the kitchen, brimming over with merriment, and bring a joyous atmosphere with them.
"This promises fun!" cried Grace, whirling Keturah around giddily in spite of her protestations.
"Turah, we want some of your very butteriest molasses taffy. What makes you look so sober, Ruth?"
They settled comfortably around the fire.
"I've brought in the molasses jug and the latter jar. Ruth took down several ears of pop-corn from the back kitchen rafters, and the girls shelled them while "Turah made the candy. At length it was finished, and set out on the side porch in two good-sized milk pans. A pyramid of snow was piled up on the blue plate, and then Grace and Ruth fell to cracking hickory nuts on flat-irons.
Kitty had just returned from a visit to Ithaca. She was overflowing with "new ideas," and after describing the latest fashions, she began to dance.
Keturah sniffed. She had been sitting by the table, listening with a pleased air to the girls' chat, but at the sight of Kitty's dancing her face lengthened again.
"That mustn't been the very place where he stood," she said, dolefully, "and the very same kind of a double-shuffle he danced. I don't like to see it, after them seven crows tonight."
There was a solemn mystery in her words which made itself felt, and the girls all huddled together as she told again the story of the sign she had seen that night.
"But I can't see that the dance is very dangerous!" pouted Kitty.
"Ever hear how your Uncle Bijie died, Ruth? My mother told me. Forty year ago Bijie Totten lived in this house, and he was a great feller for to dance a double shuffle. He was the greatest dancer in the country. Bijie was.
"Well, he had company here one night, and of course they asked him to heel and too for 'em. He stood up and began to whistle the time he danced by, when all on sudden he stopped. He told 'em seriously he felt he oughtn't to dance it. Somethin' told him not to. But they persisted and joked him, till finally he give in.
"I do it," says he, "agin my convictions."
"Once again, on the night that he died at twelve o'clock, the family regularly heard that double shuffle a-go-in' on the kitchen, and then all to once a heavy thud."
"O "Turah, stop!" cried Kitty, in an agony of terror. Ruth was white, and both Grace and Belle looked frightened.
Keturah paused, a little dismayed at the consternation she had produced.
"I don't think I shall sleep a wink tonight!" cried Kitty.
"Hark!" said Ruth, sharply: "What's that?"
It sounded as if a step was approaching the house. There was a footfall on the porch, and then a knock.
"The seven crows have come!" muttered Keturah, under her breath, as she listened intently.
The knock was repeated, and then came an imperative rap.
"No one shall open that door this night!" declared Keturah, with a white face.
Again they heard the step, and suddenly a noise arose, so terrific and deafening that it seemed as if a cyclone had struck the house. The windows rattled, and the doors shook, and with the general uproar were mingled frightful stamps and slams. These sounds doubled in violence, and low, angry growls were distinctly heard.
Panic-stricken, the girls shrink together in a holy terror. Keturah stood as if frozen, but she presently managed to say:
"It's my sign! What has happened?
Oh! what has happened? It's awful! It's awful!"
The uproar died away all at once into lullable echoes.
"Ruth, Ruth!" wailed Keturah, "either Mary is dead or somethin' terrible has happened to your mother! Didn't I say so?"
But before she had finished speaking a heavy mat's voice on the other side of the door called out:
"Won't you let me in? I'm Silas Vandevander!"
There was no mistaking it, and in a transport of relief Ruth sprang to open the door. Silas hobbled across the floor, and he usually strode, and carefully lifting first one foot and then the other, he shuffled toward the centre of the kitchen.
Once again at his feet told what had happened. Each foot was firmly fastened in the centre of a milk-pail full of soft fat, and Silas, with a queer grin, stood regarding the pans curiously.
"So that's what it was, was it?" he said, after the girls, in a strong reaction from intense fear, had laughed till the tears came. "Only some of "Turah's taffy.
Well, it's to be sticky, "Turah! I wonder at you settin' this stuff to cool on the porch. Did you calculate to ketch a burglar? I come here tonight primed for stealth, but 'twas in a fair way. I only wanted to steal you from Mrs. Tot-ten!"
A phenomenal blush overspread the gathering chagrin on Keturah's face.
Kitty giggled outright.
"I set one foot in somethin' soft," Silas went on, "an' while I was tryin' to stas it off, I set the other foot inter the same stuff. I was kind o' surprised, ye see, an' I danced considerable out there tryin' to git out o' the trap. I

Supt. Aldrich to Leave.

Two weeks since Mr. Joseph C. Jones, the superintendent of the Newton schools, tendered his resignation of that office, and gave as his reason that he could not any longer serve while the rules and regulations allowed members of the board to interfere with the performance of his duties.

At a meeting of the School Board Wednesday the Board went into executive session and voted to accept the resignation and also to elect as superintendent Mr. G. I. Aldrich of Quincy. He is to assume the duties Jan. 1, 1892.

The board subsequently debated at length the proposed changes in the rules and regulations, and decided in committee of the whole and by a vote of 6 to 5 not to adopt the amendment abolishing the present district committees.

Supt. Aldrich has had charge of the Quincy schools for many years; and they have prospered and taken high position in relation to other schools throughout the State. His resignation will be severely felt by our schools; and many of the teachers will be sorry to learn that he is about to leave them.

Republican's Jollification.

The Republican headquarters were filled to overflowing Wednesday evening with happy and jovial citizens, from all parts of the city, who had gathered to celebrate the reelection of Mayor Fairbanks.

It was a good natured crowd all filled to overflowing with happiness, everybody wanted to shake hands with everybody else and it seemed as though they could not shake hands enough.

Outside the hall the celebration took another form, quantities of red fire was burned, Roman candles and cannon crackers exploded, Japanese lanterns were hung on the outside of the building and tall candles burned in the windows.

On the sidewalks a large crowd was a large crowd of men and boys who watched the scene from their reserved seats.

Shortly after eight o'clock Mr. John F. Merrill, chairman of the Republican City Committee, requested Messrs. H. O. Souther, Joseph Spear and W. H. Riddout to go to City Hall and bring the Mayor back with them.

This committee returned with His Honor in a few moments and then there were cheers.

Chairman Merrill introduced Mayor Fairbanks and said the gathering was to celebrate a victory against the strongest candidate the Democrats could put against a Republican city, and that next year we will carry the city for Governor and State and who ever should be nominated with him, Mr. Merrill's brief remarks called for more cheers.

Those present were not satisfied with giving cheers for the Mayor and Chairman Merrill, but the councilmen and other city officials came in for their share.

A light lunch was then served, and after harkans had been lighted Chairman Merrill called order and Mr. Albert Keating was chosen chairman of the meeting.

Mayor Fairbanks was the first gentleman called upon. The Mayor's remarks were brief. He thanked the gentlemen present and the party for his reelection and hoped he would merit their approval.

Brief remarks were then made by Representative Graham, who got so excited that he sat on his hat; Commissioner Ewell; Chief Engineer Ripley; Auditor John O. Hall; Postmaster Warren W. Adams; Overseer of Poor, George H. Field; Deputy Manager of Police, George O. Langley; Chairman, John F. Merrill; Councilman, H. Walter Gray; Lester M. Pratt, T. H. Newcomb, Daniel McGrath, Arthur H. Newcomb, Charles H. Johnson, Wilson Marsh, E. B. Souther, Warren H. Riddout, Benjamin King and others.

Each gentleman, as he responded to his name, received three cheers which was taken up and reiterated by the boys on the outside.

It was a late hour before the jollification, which was a decided success, came to an end.

The majority of ex-Mayor Porter in Ward One is equally equipped, he receiving $5 plurality. Wendell G. Corbitt in Ward Five had the endorsement of both parties and is re-elected.
The License Vote.
The result of the vote on the license question is gratifying. The vote on this issue was over 400 larger and the silent vote over 100 less. The No votes increased 320 and the Yes votes only 115, making the result 1659 No and 535 Yes, about the usual proportion of two to one.
Every ward gave increased pluralities against license, varying from 48 in Ward Four, to 233 in Ward Five. Wollaston did not get its unanimous "no" vote but the vote was 11 to 1, a very good proportion. Wards One and Six gave 2 to 1 against license, and Ward Three nearly 2 to 1. In Ward Four it was the closest in the city, but the plurality was 14 larger against license.
The majority against license was exceeded but once.

FAIRBANKS REELECTED.
The Republicans Also Capture a Majority of the Council.
The battle of the ballots has again been fought, and for the fourth successive time the Republicans have elected their Mayor. Mayor Fairbanks' plurality was 61 against 45 last year, in a total vote of about 400 larger.
Major Fairbanks received a very flattering increase plurality in Wollaston his own ward, being 195 against 83 last year. This increase of 112 centuried his reelection as his total plurality was but 61. He doubled his plurality in Ward Six. In Wards One, Two, Three and Four he lost, Ward Two going Democratic by 6, against 10 Republican last year.
Mr. Hodge's plurality made the gain in Ward One that was anticipated, reducing the Republican plurality by 18. He made a large gain in Ward Four, 16 in Ward Two and 14 in Ward Three.
The Councilmen at Large.
The Councilmen at large elected are George W. Morton of Ward One, James Thompson of Ward Three, Charles L. Hammond of Ward Four, and Silas B. Duffield and Thaddeus H. Newcomb of Ward Two—four Republicans and one Democrat. George H. Brown, the fifth Republican, was only 12 behind Mr. Newcomb and 22 behind Mr. Duffield. Last year it was a solid Republican delegation.
The Ward Councilmen.
In the wards the Republicans have elected 11 out of the 20 Councilmen, and there is a tie between a Republican and Democrat in Ward Three—Mr. Bigelow and Mr. Curtis. Ward One re-elected its present Councilmen: Messrs. Bass, Holden and Gray, all Republicans.
Ward Two has an entirely new delegation: H. M. Federhen, Isaac M. Holt and H. M. Federhen, Jr., a gain of one Republican. Mr. Federhen, Sr., served in the first Council, but the others have never been in the Council.
Ward Three has re-elected William H. Warner and Lester M. Pratt, a Democrat and a Republican, and there is a tie between John P. Bigelow and John Curtis, 21, both new men.
Ward Four has re-elected its present Councilmen: Messrs. Powers, Little and Fallon, all Democrats.
Ward Six re-elected Councilmen Moxon and Rinn and sends for the third man James F. Cunningham; two Republicans and one Democrat.
The Republicans have elected the same number of ward Councilmen as last year.
School Committee.
The opposition to the present School Committee fell flat, and Dr. Gordon is handsomely re-elected as large as the PATRIOT predicted he would be. His plurality was 245 while that of Mayor Fairbanks was 61. The latter however received 22 more votes.
The majority for ex-Mayor Porter in Ward One is equally equipped, he receiving $5 plurality. Wendell G. Corbitt in Ward Five had the endorsement of both parties and is re-elected.

At the Polls.
City Hall was astir early Tuesday for the polls opened at 6 o'clock and it was necessary for City Clerk Walter H. Hodge and his assistants to be on the job to forward to each polling place the ballots and all the necessary paraphernalia. There must be no mistake or delay as the law is very strict. It is said the City Clerk laid awake all night to see that the law was not violated. It is a fact, however, that no one had to wait for our efficient City Clerk.
The success of the experiment of opening the polls at the early hour of 6 A. M. is shown more fully in the report from each ward. Quite a number returned out on a piece of paper in the morning. It is a fact, however, that no one had to wait for our efficient City Clerk.

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH.

"The Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every purchase.

Gymnasium.

The new gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. in French's hall opened for the first time Monday evening. The rooms are not quite as large as are wanted, but they will answer for the present.

There will be eight classes per week, the class nights being Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. The rooms, however, will be open every evening and when classes are not in session exercises will be given on the different pieces of apparatus.

All members of the gymnasium can if they wish be examined free of expense by Dr. Gordon, to determine what weak points they may have that need developing. This examination is, however, not compulsory.

The hall is brilliantly illuminated with electric lights. Near the entrance are some fifty-four lockers to be used by the members for their clothes, also two sponge baths which are supplied with hot and cold water.

The apparatus, which is the latest improved, consists of a vaulting bar, an abdominal mat, seven sets of chest weights, a rowing machine, punch bag, three mattresses, fifteen pair of 1 pound dumb-bells, ten pair of 14 pound Indian clubs, five pair of 14 pound Indian clubs and a set of parallel bars.

For the treatment of paralysis, deformities, epilepsy, brain and nervous diseases in all their forms. The only paralytic institute in the United States. Consultation and advice at the Institute in person or by mail. Patients at their homes in Boston if desired. Circulars mailed to any address.

Institute Open Daily from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M.

City Elections.

Twelve Massachusetts cities held election Tuesday. None of the contests for Mayor were very close but Taunton, Haverhill, Gloucester and Lawrence had close votes on the election question.

We have compiled the following comparative whole sale list of the Quincy City except Cambridge, shows either a gain in the No majority or loss in the Yes majority:

Brookline, No. 607 Yes. 104 Cambridge, No. 561 Yes. 147 Chelsea, No. 81 Yes. 417 Danvers, No. 307 Yes. 700 Haverhill, No. 493 Yes. 100 Lawrence, No. 621 Yes. 140 Lowell, No. 1171 Yes. 1171 Salem, No. 897 Yes. 1053 Springfield, No. 1,289 Yes. 1,289 Taunton, No. 401 Yes. 19

Gymnastic Class.

It is not perhaps generally known that some of the teachers of the Quincy City have formed a class in gymnastics, which meets in Plumer's hall, Tuesday and Thursday evenings of each week from 4.30 to 5.30 o'clock.

The system practiced by them is the celebrated Swedish Lysing system, which is acknowledged to be the best in the world. Their instructor is Miss Martin of the Boston Normal School of gymnastics.

This system differs somewhat from that usually found in gymnastics, and is designed to bring all of the muscles into play, and to develop the body. The teachers intend to instruct their scholars in the system which teaches them to stand erect and improve their appearance in other matters.

In some places the expense of these instructions to the teachers is borne by the city, but here the expense is $5 per quarter is borne by the teachers themselves, which shows their progressive spirit.

Fire at Atlantic.

An alarm from box 62, corner of Hancock and Atlantic streets, called the fire department to Atlantic Sunday afternoon. The apparatus from the central station made a remarkably quick run, showing that it can be depended upon, even in this outlying town. The cause of the alarm was the spread of a grass fire which ignited a pile of new railroad sleepers on the Granite Branch of the Old Colony near the Atlantic Junction.

Those I run a line from the hydrant on Hancock street near the bridge over the fence and under the railroad tracks, and water was poured on for an hour.

The chemical went in a rather round about way going to the box first, as it very naturally should. Hose 2 from Wollaston was also promptly on hand.

The hose was trifling, probably costing the Old Colony, whose property was burned, less than the city which responded to put it out. The grass was burning some time before the alarm was given.

The new bell placed in fire alarm service at Atlantic last week did not for some reason give any alarm.

W. R. C. Officers.

The Woman's Relief Corps held its annual election Tuesday evening, resulting in the choice of the following officers: President, Mrs. Laura E. Holt. Senior Vice President, Mrs. Sarah J. Williamson. Junior Vice President, Mrs. Electa Field. Treasurer, Mrs. Angie Loud. Chaplain, Mrs. Isabel Hovey. Conductors, Mrs. Emma Hancock, Guard, Mrs. Emma Newcomb. Delegates, Mrs. Gould and Mrs. Fanny Newcomb.

An Aged Pedestrian.

Mr. William Johnson of Roxbury, who is now in his 77th year, made a short call at this office on Tuesday, having walked from his home to this city, and returning on the same day. Mr. Johnson is quite a pedestrian having recently walked to Randolph and back the same day, and last summer tramped to Plymouth in one day and returned after a day or two's rest.

Dr. Gilbert. Among the sensational news of the present week was the report of the serious sickness of Dr. J. H. Gilbert, Quincy's oldest physician, and the news was received with sorrow, as the doctor is a general favorite and his advice is much sought for. On inquiry at his house we learned that the doctor had been quite seriously sick, confined to his bed for a week, but today, Friday, was somewhat better. May the doctor be restored to perfect health, in the wish of his host of friends in this city.

The new brick sidewalk in front of City hall and leading to the depot, is completed and is appreciated by the public, particularly the patrons of the Old Colony. City hall will also be much more attractive when the reclaimed land on the north is graded and grassed. The brick sidewalk should be continued as far as South's periodical store at least. Why not do even more, and extend it to Franklin street or farther?

—Real estate in Boston and suburbs is having such a boom that there seems to be room for energetic young business men in this department. The real estate firm of Alvord & Ward, 113 Devonshire street, Boston, has recently been organized. Mr. A. and E. F. Alvord have had extensive experience in investment securities. Mr. Herbert D. Ward is a well known resident of Newton, and by his wide acquaintance and prominent standing is peculiarly adapted to this business. Mr. R. F. Alvord will attend to the business in this vicinity.

—C. E. Woodbury calls the attention of our citizens to his large stock of useful articles, which would make acceptable and beautiful Christmas presents. He can give his patrons great bargains; much better than they can get in Boston.

—The present season has been an unusually good one for the Burdett Business College of Boston. Over 500 students have been registered at this favorite school since Sept. 1st.

CITY COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the City Council was held Saturday evening at the usual hour, to draw three jurors for the Dedham Court. Sixteen members were present, the absentees being Councilmen Drake, Sherman, Hayward, Little, Pope, Pratt and Sherman.

Upon motion of Councilman Hammond the following jurors were drawn by Councilman Bass: Henry McGrath, Price Morris and George Crane.

The Council then adjourned, having been in session six minutes.

Twenty members of the City Council were present at the adjourned meeting Wednesday evening. Outside the rails were Councilmen-elect Fether and Fether, Jr. Some of the would-be councilmen were also there, Messrs. Hovey and Cahill. It was quite a lively, interesting meeting. The absentees were Councilmen Fallon, Hayward and Little.

Increase for Commissioner.

The following communication was received from Mayor Fairbanks:

QUINCY, Dec. 8, 1891. James Thompson, President of City Council: Sir: I would call the attention of the Council to the annual salary schedule on the Commissioner of Public Works, as per section 4 of our charter.

To properly attend to the same, it is absolutely necessary that the appointee be required to devote his entire time through the day, and also that he be in attendance at his office. In view of the work devolving upon this office, I would recommend that the ordinance governing salaries be amended by making the salary of the Commissioner of Public Works larger.

H. O. FAIRBANKS, Mayor.

President Thompson was about to refer the communication to the Committee on Salaries when Councilman Bryant objected. He favored immediate action. The duties of the office demanded a better salary. Thought $1050 much too small. He did not know where to go to find a man who could fill the position better than Commissioner Ewell. During Mayor Porter's administration the Council had looked with favor on an increase to $2000, but wanted to know first who the man was. Did not think $2500 an extravagant salary for the present official.

Councilman Jones thought the matter might be referred to the next Council, but was reminded that salaries for 1892 must be fixed by the present Council.

The communication was laid on the table and subsequently Councilman Bryant offered an order to amend the ordinance as suggested. The order was adopted and was referred to the Committee on Salaries.

Communications from the City Auditor reported the appropriation for the city keeping and showing in the fire department as exhausted, and the appropriation for interest to be inadequate. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

A communication from the School Committee recommended the enlargement of Wollaston school lot. Referred to Committee on Finance.

The School Committee asked for a transfer of $150 from evening schools to the day schools, and also an additional $200 for $200 for fuel. Referred to Committee on Finance.

Firemen's Salaries. A communication of the Chief Engineer recommended an increase of salaries for the firemen and drivers at the central station to $17 and the assistant engineer to $16. Referred to Committee on Finance.

Monthly Statement. The December statement was $28,540. It would require about $2000 more for the heating. He believed $30,000 would complete the building for occupancy.

Councilman Moxon said the plans would require some modifications, and believed the committee should have the authority to make such modifications.

Councilman Roberts said the plans under consideration were not even as expensive as the Malden school. The principal of this school is Mr. Emerson formerly of Wollaston, and he considered it a model building.

Councilman Pratt was satisfied an appropriation of $30,000 would be ample. A slight amendment offered by Councilman Jones was adopted.

Councilman Moxon believed it an absolute impossibility for the committee to report to this Council.

Councilman Pratt thought differently and offered an amendment substituting a special committee of three.

Councilman Powers opposed and favored reference to the next Council.

Councilman Bryant opposed. It was out of the question to expect a report at the next meeting.

Councilman Jones believed School Committee would accept plans.

Councilman Moxon was willing to do the best he could and Councilman Pratt was willing to do the best he could.

The order was adopted, and the Council adjourned at 10 o'clock.

GOOD PIE

is much prized, but many people can't eat pie because of dyspepsia or dyspeptic tendency.

CAN EAT PIE

if it is made with Cottole, the new pure substitute for lard. Cottole is simply pure cottonseed oil and pure beef suet, two of the healthiest foods known.

Properly combined they are better than lard for all kinds of shortening, and everyone can eat, digest, and enjoy food cooked with it. Food that was indigestible when cooked with lard, is easily digested when cooked with Cottole, and many of the leading house-keepers of the land say that they can make nice bread, rolls, biscuits, cakes, cookies, ginger bread, pies, patties, tarts, griddle cakes, croquettes with Cottole than with either lard or butter. Get it of your grocer and try it. Beware of imitations.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Dreams Have Grown Dear.

Dreams have grown dear to me since she has died,
For in them she once more walks at my side,
And again we are as one.

So night, although its waking hours bring grief,
Has yet in store for me some slight relief,
Ere dawns the morrow's sun.

It is so best to see her as you are,
In the same garb that here on earth she wore,
When I see her stand.

I feel no separation in my dream,
She is beside me, and all things do seem
As in those days of yore.

When, suddenly, I wake, the dream has gone,
That blessed sight I look no more upon,
The vision is no more.

So dreams are sweet to me, for they bring back
The presence that above all else I lack,
The voice I long to hear;

Day has its glare which drives such scenes away,
But when night comes unto my brain there may Come dreams, now grown so dear.

Miscellany.

MR. NORSEMAN.

"Good-looking, distinguished and very fond of me—really, why not?" said Mrs. Vandervoort. "Of course he is not young," she continued; "but, after all, I'm a widow of 40."

She folded the note she had just received and placed it in its envelope.

"I think I'll say yes," she mused. "I am lonely sometimes, and that dear little girl he speaks of may be a very pleasant companion."

The note that had set Mrs. Vandervoort into this train of thought was from the most devoted of her admirers, Mr. Norseman.

A widow with two hundred thousand dollars safely invested is sure to have admirers, and Mrs. Vandervoort was a handsome woman as well as a woman of means.

Mr. Norseman had iron gray hair and rather an elderly look about the throat and shoulders, but he was a man of elegant manners. He spoke of his "little place on the Hudson" in a way that made people understand that it was a very fine one, and that the prefix was the outgrowth of modesty. The general opinion was that he had retired from business. He seldom spoke of the matter. He had, however, told the widow that he was still connected with certain mercantile enterprises "as a sort of sleeping partner."

For the rest, he dressed well, walked well, made offerings of roses at their most expensive seasons, and professed himself to be madly in love with Mrs. Vandervoort.

The fear of being married from motives of interest had often intervened to prevent the widow from accepting the pointed attentions of men younger than herself. They did not arise in thinking of Mr. Norseman, settled and solid as he was.

"I'll do it!" the widow said to herself. "A woman is so much happier with a protector, and I'm sure I should be proud of Mr. Norseman; and after awhile one fades a little, and it is a great deal more comfortable to occupy a natural position, as a widow who has no family is always a sort of elderly girl."

Then Mrs. Vandervoort sat down to her desk and, taking her most delicate pen, inked on her finest paper the following epistle:

"DEAR MR. NORSEMAN—I have received your note and read it very carefully. Without actually giving you a positive answer at this moment, I will say that its contents do not displease me. I am going into the country for a visit to-morrow and will remain away three days. On Thursday I shall be at home all the afternoon and should be glad to see you. Yours sincerely,

ADELAIDE VANDERVOORT."

Having sent this little note to the post box by a servant, Mrs. Vandervoort prepared for her visit to an old aunt at—, and shortly left New York behind her.

"This visit was, I regret to say, a sort of penance which Mrs. Vandervoort imposed upon herself every spring. The aunt was one of those ancient females who, having outlived vanity and the desire to dodge time delights in unpleasant reminiscences and in recording the passage of years.

Mrs. Vandervoort knew that her age would be mentioned within the first ten minutes; that she would be forced to remember things she desired to forget; that all those skeletons which the most respectable people desire to lock away in cupboards would be trotted out, and that she would return to the city with a large collection of ancient goods to match—silk of obsolete colors, woollens of a sort no longer worn, cottons of patterns at least twenty-five years old.

She would sleep in a sort of state bedroom, where she always expected to see a ghost; she would be obliged to read aloud from ancient devotional works printed with long s's, or from such novels as "Sir Charles Grandison" and "Amelia;" she would be requested to sing and accompany herself on a little old piano of six octaves, which had not been tuned for thirty years, and to assist in the making of very coarse red flannel petticoats for the poor of the church. Sunday she would spend in a draggish little church, where a well-meaning but feeble old preacher would read one of his old sermons and where much hand-making must be gone through in the vestibule. Moreover, there would be at least two wearisome tea drinkings—one at the residence of Col.

Whackem, whose memory had grown weak, and who always took her for her own grandmother; the other all that of Mrs. Leedsy, who went to all the funerals she heard of and entertained her guests solely with accounts thereof. However, it was a superstition of Mrs. Vandervoort's that it was her duty to visit Aunt Tabitha, and she always performed it once a year.

On this occasion the old lady's reminiscences were more unpleasant than usual, the novels more wearisome, the sermons more inaudible and the tea drinkings more ghastly, and it was with a sense of relief that she found her visit at an end and bid her aunt good-by. Her trunk had been sent to the depot in the morning, and as she was fond of walking, she decided to follow on the foot.

"Take the road to the right then, Adelaide," Aunt Tabitha had said. "It's better paved."

Accordingly Adelaide took the road to the right and found it much longer than she expected. As she entered the depot her trunk steamed out of it, and there was no other to New York for two long hours.

The little wooden building was close and unpleasant, and after pacing it nervously for awhile Mrs. Vandervoort sauntered out again, and turning down a well shaded road came home to a little yellow house, the front of which seemed to be a general store, while across the back garden fence she read in black letters the legend: "Ice cream garden." Within the fence stood an arbor. In the arbor was a table and a young woman with sharp features, who wore a dress, apron and sun-bonnet, all made of the same blue checked gingham, stalked out of the house, checked the dog furiously and entered the arbor in three long strides.

"Don't look at me," was her salutation. "I haven't had time to wash my face yet. I take after poor ma in appearance."

"Ginger snaps or lemon snaps is all the cake I've got," said the young woman. "Well, we have to take what we can get here. 'Tisn't like the city. You're from the city?"

Mr. Vandervoort bowed.

was as good as he is pretty he'd be a very nice father to have, wouldn't he?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Vandervoort, a little sadly. It was a handsome face, and she had grown fond of it. "Yes, I'm very much interested in you."

"We have had a real nice little visit haven't we?" said Miss Norseman. "I wish I'd been more fixed up; but I guess I'll be more drowsy when I go to New York to live with pa and his second wife."

"My dear Miss Norseman," said the widow, "never calculate too much on anything in this world. It is one of disappointments."

She smiled and walked away. A little further on she sighed.

"Goodness knows it is to me," she said, petulantly.

But on Thursday, when Mr. Norseman called in his new suit, armed with a fragrant bunch of hot house roses, Mrs. Vandervoort was simply not at home.

Geology of Braintree and Quincy.

Miss Elizabeth S. Weston read a paper before the United Library Circle of Weymouth recently, which was published in last week's Weymouth Gazette, and as it gives some facts relating to Quincy and its immediate surroundings, we give a few extracts to our readers and think they will be found quite interesting.

"The table of the rocks in this vicinity have convinced geologists that the oldest formation in Braintree is the slate rock that forms so large a part of the ledge in the eastern section of the town and along the Monaquet river.

"This slate belongs to the Cambrian or lower Silurian, the earliest period of the Paleozoic Age. It is also known as the age of invertebrates from the fact that the only fossils found anywhere in the world in this formation are animal without internal organs skeletons. This slate rock is the Primordial or earliest beach, and is made of material eroded from the first rocks that were uplifted above the waters that covered the whole earth, which material was deposited in the form of mud precisely as mud is deposited today.

"This mud was mixed with shells of crustaceans that lived in or on it, while it was being deposited and has been hardened into rock by long continued heat and pressure. It has been gradually uplifted from the water and distorted by the following process of cooling which has resulted in the process of cooling which has resulted in going on but the effect of which was vastly more violent at that age. This slate deposit has been so eroded during the vast period of time that has elapsed since it was first uplifted that only patches of it remain in existence. The fact that these patches are remnants of a beach is proven by the existence in it of shore marks of all kinds, such as ripple marks, sun cracks, worm tracks, worm borings, and shells of various kinds.

"The beach of the utmost interest to geologists as it contains the remains of the earliest known animal life in great variety and abundance. One form of this animal life is found in one of the patches of this ancient beach in East Braintree and this has been locally very famous among geologists. This patch is known as the Braintree quarry, and is situated on land of Mr. Hayward on Hayward's creek, near the Quincy line. An immense number of trilobites of the variety known as Paradoxides Harlani have been taken from this patch in the past few years. These trilobites are the remains of a crustacean that was somewhat analogous to the modern horseshoe crab, so plentiful in our river today. The name, trilobite, is given them on account of the three lobes into which their bodies are divided longitudinally.

"The stone taken from this quarry was first used for filling at Jeffries Point, East Boston, and that locality has doubtless had many fine specimens of these fossils dumped in its waters. For many years those who worked in the quarry had no idea of the curious impressions in the rock were. They called them 'images' and doubtless wondered what caused them. It is not surprising as Agassiz tells of an old German professor who described a fossil animal found in the rocks of a much later age than the trilobite slate, as the bones of an infant destroyed by the flood, and the fossil was actually preserved, not for its scientific value, but as a precious relic of the flood.

"About twenty-five years ago Prof. Jackson of Harvard College, who was spending the summer in the vicinity of the quarry, had his attention called to the 'images' and at once pronounced them trilobites, and since that time probably every geologist and geological student who has been in Massachusetts has made a pilgrimage to Hayward's trilobite quarry and many hundreds of specimens have been carried away. They are still found. A geologist from the Smithsonian, at Washington, spent a month or two here last summer and is to have sent to that institution a cart load of specimens. The Boston public school teachers' class in geology in their field excursion to this quarry this fall also obtained some fine specimens.

"This quarry is the only one in which fossils have been found in this vicinity, but from the similarity in the stone there seems to be no doubt but all the slate of Braintree, Quincy and Weymouth belongs to the same age. Some favorable circumstance evidently spared these fossils in this particular locality from the complete annihilation that has occurred to them elsewhere. Adjoining the slate ledges are immense ledges of granite underlying nearly the whole of Braintree, and cropping out in many places.

Geologists now think that the granite of this vicinity has been formed later than the slate. It was supposed, until recently, that this granite was older than the slate, that it had belonged to the very first rock that was lifted above the all-covering waters, but a study of the exposed points of contact between the slate and the granite in this vicinity has clearly established one of the most important facts in the geology of the Boston basin, viz: that the granite in a melted state had been erupted through, and is therefore newer than the Primordial slate.

"There is another very interesting quarry about a quarter of a mile from the trilobite ledge. It is known as the Curtis ledge and was opened about sixty years ago, and worked until it got so deep that it was abandoned, on account of the expense of pumping the water. This water now makes a beautiful lake, and the echo from the smooth, high face of the western wall is very fine. The stone is of the pink variety.

The first architectural use made of Quincy granite was for King's Chapel in Boston. The stone for this building was cut from the boulders scattered about on North and South Common as it was then called. So many of the boulders were used that it frightened the town authorities and several very spirited town meetings were held to discuss the question of the exhaustion of the granite.

"They said the stones would be all used up, and that there would not be any for home use. This was before they knew how to split the stone from the ledges. The manner in which they cut the boulders was very different from the present method; then they built a fire under the rock to be split, and threw heavy iron balls upon it until it split.

"Before Bunker Hill Monument was built, the architect looked at all the ledges in the vicinity of Boston, and tradition says that in his explorations, he walked three hundred miles and finally decided to use the Quincy stone, and so opened the first quarry about 1825.

"It is also interesting to note that the first railroad in the United States was built in 1827 and operated in connection with this quarry, the facilities for the transportation of the stone to the Neponset river, where it was loaded on lighters and carried to Charlestown. Six thousand seven hundred tons of granite were carried over this road and used for the monument.

"According to the most generally accepted theory, the glacial period was about eleven thousand

Birthday Party.

One of the most notable social events of the season was the reception given by Mr. Charles J. Russell to his friends at his home on South street, the occasion being his twenty-first birthday. The list of invited guests, which included some notable out-of-town persons, arrived early in the evening, bringing with them many beautiful and useful presents. At 10 o'clock the order for supper was announced, and a line formed for the dining-room, where a bountiful and appetizing collation was served. After supper the party repaired to the parlor where singing and other amusements were indulged in until the hours of morning, when the assembly broke up singing "Auld Lang Syne." Three cheers were given for the young gentlemen and a wish was expressed that he might live and enjoy many more years of life.

Jessie Couthon Entertainers.

The Saturday evening entertainment in the Young Men's Christian Association course was the best yet. There were but three artists: Jessie Couthon, Shandrew, recitationist; Willard E. Shandrew, baritone; Miss Jessie M. Downer, solo pianist and accompanist.

The "popular" is properly placed as host in herself. Although down for four numbers, she really gave nine, and the variety was remarkable. Mr. Shandrew's solos were much appreciated and were heartily cheered. Miss Downer is an accomplished pianist and a good singer.

The attendance was the largest of any in the course, nearly every seat being occupied.

Old Colony Terrace.

The immense call now about half completed on Old Colony avenue, Wollaston, just across the bridge has been the subject of considerable curiosity. Your correspondent called on the owner, Councilman Sherman, and from a brief but pleasant interview with this extremely busy man learned the following particulars:

The building will be one hundred and thirty-seven feet long and will consist of a block of six separate houses, and they will be furnished with every modern improvement. A spacious hall, parlor and sitting room, and kitchen and pantry on the first floor, with four large chambers and bath on the second story, will be furnished with attics above, and laundry in the basement. Each house will be distinctly separate from the others, for, although the building will be constructed of wood there will be a substantial brick wall between each house.

To Build a Fine House.

A nice house is to be erected on Franklin street, nearly opposite to Henry C. Kendrick's residence. Mr. M. W. Froland has the contract for about $8,000 to build a house and barn for John L. Miller, one of our energetic stone contractors. Mr. Miller has bought a piece of land of Mr. Froland, and is now erecting a house on it. The house will be a two-story affair, with a large hall and a large parlor, and will be a very fine residence, which he intends to occupy; moving from the one now occupied by him on Garfield street.

THE GAIN for no-license in Massachusetts this year is very gratifying to friends of temperance. Even Boston cannot now be called a "dry" city, and the license majority from 15,240 to 4,263. Lynn which has not voted "no" since 1881 is close. Worcester changed from 122 "yes" to 401 "no." Newburyport, the other city to vote Tuesday, still remains in the license column, giving a majority of 511. Not since 1886 has so many of the present cities voted "no." Should the total vote of the Massachusetts cities this year be compiled, we believe there would be a majority against license.

WE LEARN with regret of the death of Hon. Nathaniel A. Horton, the veteran editor of the Salem Gazette, which took place Monday afternoon of pneumonia. He was among the ablest editors in the State, and had made his newspapers very influential. He had represented his city in the common council, the House of Representatives and the Senate, and had held many positions of trust. Among the editors of the State he was well known, being an ex-president of the Massachusetts Press Association, and the life of many of the annual excursions and meetings. His last illness was not severe, but he died at his residence, Quincy Avenue.

All work executed in a workmanlike manner.

Quincy, March 12.

THE MEETING of the City Council next Monday evening promises to be an important one. It will be the last regular meeting of the Council of 1891. We anticipate that there will be several adjustments. But two weeks, however, remain in which to clear the dock of a large amount of business which has been allowed to accumulate. The present Council intends to pass and adjourn on Monday, and the widening of Water street will be pushed. A hearing on the latter measure will further complicate the business of Monday evening. Then there is the petition of the Freight Railway for a location not yet returned upon, and several other matters. It will be a busy evening, and we believe that several measures which must be crowded into two or three.

Population of Cities.

The Census of 1890 shows 197 cities larger than Quincy. Of these 9 have a population of a million, 25 have between one hundred thousand and a million, 30 between fifty and one hundred thousand, 16 between forty and fifty thousand, 28 between thirty and forty thousand, 62 between twenty and thirty thousand, and the remainder less than twenty thousand.

There are in the United States just fifty cities with populations of from 15,000 to 20,000. In this list is the city of Quincy, with a population of 16,723. Seventeen of these are smaller, as will be seen by the figures given. Another interesting column is added, showing the percentage of gain in each city in the ten years from 1880 to 1890. We congratulate ourselves that the percentage for Quincy is 58.21. This will compare very well with the average below. Only eight doubled their population, and at the head of these is Spokane Falls, Washington, which from a population of 350 in 1880, increased to 19,922 in 1890, a gain of 5,592 per cent. San Diego, Cal.; Flint, Mich.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Sheboygan, Wis.; Lima, O.; Bayonne, N. J.; and Elgin, Ill., are other rapidly growing cities in this class.

In the following cities (more than one half) the percentage of increase is smaller than Quincy: Bangor, Me.; Belvidere, Ill.; Concord, N. H.; Danbury, Conn.; Galesburg, Ill.; Hamilton, O.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Lafayette, Ind.; Leavenworth, Kas.; Lockport, N. Y.; Lynchburg, Va.; Nashua, N. H.; New Brunswick, N. J.; Newport, R. What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrup, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Cud, cures Diarrhea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

Dr. G. C. OSOON, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I have the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

SATURDAY, DEC. 10, 1891.

Christmas Thoughts.

At Christmas Tide, O be thou tender, true;
He friend to all, and all thy foes forgive;
The fountain of thy soul with love revere,
And in the dear Christ's spirit sweetly live.
May thy glad life with joy and hope expand,
Let there be one full day within the year,
When love shall open wide its waiting hand,
To lessen want and give a better tear.

Angels may sing, but sorrow hath its reign,
And vice and sin and wretchedness are rife;
The earth is filled with wrong and pain,
And shadows fall betimes on every life.

Souls are there many heavy laden, sore,
And eyes that weep, and hearts that often bleed,
And angels knocking tattered at the door,
And cold and hunger crying in their need.

Give wisely, freely, of thy bounty give,
And most of all, do not forget to love,
Since giving is the truest way to live,
And richest treasures laying up to store.

Make glad thy home, let sunshine reign Within,
Bless every hearthstone with thy largest fair;
Share with pale want some brother's cheer,
By kindness save some brother from despair.

Be a good Christian, do thou good and well,
Smile and be noble, do not harshly judge;
With "Peace, Good Will," let life's glad swell,
Nay, send thy happy hours grudgeless.

Be saviors, O my brothers, every one,
Let the true Christ in your own soul be born;
Thus thou canst be God's well-beloved son,
And make each dawn a joyous Christmas morn!

A GOOD SCHEME. The plan of building the proposed Episcopal cathedral of New York from the income of funds raised would seem to be the application of good business principles to a religious enterprise.

The funds in that case would remain after the Cathedral was done, and the church itself would be assured of a constant income. This fact would be more than a matter of mere satisfaction, for with such an enterprise the running expenses are always large and there is no guarantee that the receipts from the congregation will always meet them. The plan, however, will commend itself to the most for the reason that the money will have to be raised before the Cathedral is begun. Debits are the curses of too many church enterprises.

SHIP BUILDING. The proposed establishment of a line of four-masted barkentines in the California trade promises to give a boom to the Bath, Me., shipbuilding industry. The first of these vessels has already been ordered, and the keel is now on the stocks. Seamen are watching the progress of it with a deal of interest, as the attempt is to be made to combine the best qualities of the schooner with those of the ship.

LA GRIPPE. The gripple is still around us, and in many places is quite prevalent. In Hartford, Conn., there are many cases, and it is said that the symptoms are somewhat changed since its last appearance. In Denver, Col., it is an epidemic, which came about three weeks ago with the first snowfall, and has increased its number of victims until now there are nearly 5000 cases.

—In the will of the late King of Wurtemberg some curious legacies were left. The bootblack under the palace gates was to wear patent leather shoes for the rest of his life, he dressed in blue tweed homespun and receive a pension of 1,000 marks a year. An old apple woman who sweeps a crossing around the corner gets a pleasant position in the palace, a black silk gown and a small pension.

—A horse in the Boston police department is getting a reputation for being a bit of a trouble maker. One of the officers leaves his horse in the same stable and fastens him near by, the other horse picks up hay and forces it through the iron grating of his stall for his guest to eat.

—The man who reads the local paper, but neglects to read the advertisements, fails to get a comprehensive idea of what the town is doing in the way of making local history. The advertisements have a story to tell which has a bearing upon the subject as well as the news items.

Anecdotes.

Little Girl—I wonder what the reason all our school teachers go on at market.

Little Boy—I guess it's cause they likes to boss.

Visitor—"You've grown, Tommy, since last year."

Tommy (disdainfully)—Oh, yes! Why, I only came up as high as my necktie then.

"Mamma, please give me a drink of water. I am so thirsty."

"If you don't turn over and go to sleep I'll get up and spank you!" (Another pause.)

"Mamma, won't you please gimme a drink when you get up to spank me?"

Beggs—"There is one thing the young man who goes through college never gets."

Foggs—"What is that?"

Beggs—"To mention the fact."

An Irishman, who was engaged to cut ice from a pond, when handed a one-cent saw to commence operations with, pulled out a cent, and turning to his comrade, exclaimed:

"Now, Pat, fair play; head or tail, to see who goes below."

Teacher—"Which is the shortest month of the year?"

Small Boy—"August."

Teacher—"August?"

"Yes'm. That's the last month of vacation."

The Christmas Kiss.

Close to the hearth hung two little socks
Of two happy boys, with curly locks,
Who had just crept into their beds,
They rolled, and tossed and prattled, like boys,
Of toys and sleds and childish toys,
And then they covered their heads.

One hastened on to the City of Nod,
Where old Father Time, with his magical rod,
Sits on his kingly throne.

The other one waited with wide-open eyes,
Then slipped off of bed with surprise,
To find he was all alone!

Two little bare feet crept over the floor;
And the owner opened the bedroom door;
Then a tiny sock pinned to the wall,
"This one's for mamma!"—the clock struck twelve.

"And give her this kiss—you'll find her in heaven,
No matter how late you call!"

He said Saint Peter would tell all he knew,
He would say then an angel's gaze passed through
And left a heaven of bliss

To go to that room, to that chubby faced child,
And look in his eyes, so tender and mild,
As she took for herself a kiss!

Miscellaneous.

THEIR CHRISTMAS.

Two grotesque and greatly elongated shadows seemed exerting themselves to the utmost to maintain their proper relation to two horsemen, whose sturdy "cayuse" ponies were carrying them swiftly across the brown prairie of late Italian Summer.

The red tail of the sun seemed to pause an instant when the far off rim of the prairie laid hid its face. Then the long shadows grew less and less distinct, and, presently, as the sun dropped from sight
below what seemed the edge of the world, they ceased length with the fleet cays,
and their cowboy riders.

"Tex," said one of the horsemen, suddenly, "seems like you could see the sun move, it sinks so fast just as it is settling. Ever notice it?"

"No," was the answer. "Don't reckon I ever did."

"Wal, I have, many a time. I wonder—"

"Yes," broke in the other, "you're always wonderin' about sunnins. Got no right to be wonderin' now. Hat to hustle to under our little business with the granger an' git to Ole Man Shannon's in time for the dance!"

The speaker expressed his remark with a pop of his three-toed "quirt" whip the hardest wheel of the wagon. As animals increased their speed to a keen gallop. Even in the fast-falling twilight, the unusual smartness of attire of the two cowboys was apparent. The silver wire encircled their broad heads gleamed brightly, as if from a recent scouring, and about the throat of each cowboy was a flaming silk handkerchief. The bright embroidery on the fronts of their woolen shirts was unhidden by coat or vest. Had the huge revolver been drawn from its holster at the right hand of each cowboy, it would have shown the bright effect of prolonged polishing. It was evident that the coming festival at Ole Man Shannon's was to be no common affair, worthy only of hasty preparation.

"Tex," said the cowboy, "Tex" suddenly, "tell you what's a fact: I would not miss the shindig at Shannon's forward, for a heap!"

"Nur me!" promptly replied his comrade, "the 'Deacon,' 'Nellie Hicks' will be there!"

"Yes an'—"

"Texas, 'for short' called 'Tex,' who seemed bashfully confused.

"An' 'Liddy Bender'?" "Deacon" suggested.

"She'll be there!" cried Tex enthusiastically. "If she had her way, there'd be a granger on every quarter! But, we sorto look out for that," he added grimly,
"an' the grangers don't stay long, somehow. Don't like the climate, mebbe!"

Perhaps it was the dislike of the climate,
but, more likely, the abbreviated sojourn of the hated grangers were due to the energetic opposition of the cattle men.

"The Elephant."

That immense building at West Quincy, known as Willard School, which broke the back of its contractors and injured several others before it came to maturity is about to burden the city with its vigorous appetite. It was carefully decorated during its growth by that fashionable physician, known as "The Smead" until it reached its full size; then it was so strong and so sturdy that the attendant was discouraged and wanted more help or assistance (money) to keep it warm and comfortable.

And now the advertiser says it will cost the City of Quincy $100,000 to feed it. The City of Quincy is not to be kept comfortable. Four times this mild winter one of the schools have been dismissed because the janitor could not get the temperature above 40 degrees. The advertiser believes it would be economy to take out the furnace, and heat the building by steam, as it would cost not one-half as much and do the work better.

New Timetable on O. C. R. R.

On January 4 the present system of running trains on the Old Colony will be abandoned and Supt. French's old time schedule, with a few changes, will be put into effect. This will necessitate the taking off of nearly eighty trains (outward and inward) and means a saving of thousands of dollars to the road.

The present system, which went into effect last June, has proved an enormously expensive experiment, the management having sunk thousands of dollars in testing it. It has been found that this system could not be operated on a two-track road, to carry it successfully through requires a four-track road, more locomotives and cars and a passenger station having a larger train house.

When Supt. Allen and his associates got this system they honestly believed that they were doing the patrons of the road a favor, they had no idea that it would discommode so many, now the patrons of their error they have the manliness to acknowledge it and withdraw from their untenable position.

The announcement that the Old Colony Railroad will restore on Jan. 4 its timetable of a year ago, has caused some of a flutter among the patrons all along the line. The Quincy Central patrons are jubilant because they will have more trains. What the changes will be, outsiders cannot now tell, but Quincy will probably have express trains and accommodations as a year ago. It will not be necessary for Quincy people to make change at Atlantic for way stations, and people going south will not have to make change at Braintree. The quick time made at present (when time is appreciated, and will probably be appreciated, without delay, on the new express).

West Quincy people are the most anxious for they are among those best accommodated. Where they had but ten trains each way a year ago they now have twenty-four, and naturally are anxious to retain them. Quincy people hope they may, and will give them what support they can, although they were lukewarm when Quincy was slaughtered.

Quincy Adams is another station that will suffer if the order of things is to be completely restored, for it now has forty-nine trains where it had but thirty-six a year ago. It is to be hoped that the Old Colony has seen the wisdom of giving South Quincy good service and will continue as many trains as possible.

Wollaston is liable to lose a total of six trains, but may not. It was well satisfied with the old timetable and is not particularly worried at the proposed change.

If some of the present trains were dropped they would not be missed, but people hope if it is to be the old timetable, the patrons will be many improvements which the growing community really demands.

The following table shows the number of trains at present and also a year ago:

	Present	A Year Ago
Quincy	57	69
Quincy Adams	49	35
Wollaston	40	46
Atlantic	37	43
West Quincy	48	40
East Milton	48	20
Total Stops	346	225

Supt. Aldrich Surprised.

A convention of the teachers of the public schools was held Tuesday evening, but it was not of the usual variety. The teachers of the Quincy schools with few exceptions gathered in the evening at the High school and about 8 o'clock proceeded to the residence of Mr. George I. Aldrich, the Superintendent of Schools, on South street.

Mr. Aldrich had been let into the secret, and kindly put the house at their disposal.

The Superintendent was soon made aware of the object of their visit. They were the advance guard of a Santa Claus and though their sacks were not heavily laden, it is not often one is so valuable.

The gifts which are valued at nearly $100, consist of a silver tea service, a pair of Roman gold cuff buttons with diamond inlaid, and three silver spoons. There are five pieces in the service, which are of Gorham ware; coffee, tea, sugar, creamer and slop bowl. The sides of each are plain with the exception of the mark, an old English "A," while the tops are fluted, giving the service a rich and solid appearance. The silver spoons are elegant, each one being marked, "G. I. A."

The souvenir spoons are of "Salen White-craft." "The Landing of the Pilgrims," and "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere." The first part of the evening was enjoyed socially. Then came the presentation by Principal Lull of the High School who will succeed Supt. Aldrich.

While presenting the gifts in behalf of the teachers as a token of their esteem, Mr. Lull referred to the success that has attended all of Mr. Aldrich's efforts to keep the Quincy schools up to their high standard and even to broaden them by the introduction of nature studies. The speaker alluded to the honors won in conventions, institutes and summer schools, and also to the elevation to that most honorable body, the Board of Education. Emphasis was laid upon the progressive work, the broadening tendencies in both the teacher's and the scholar's life; the helpful advice, the hearty sympathy, the kindly criticism of the retiring superintendent. Regrets at the separation, because of the loss to the Granite city, and, in particular, to the teachers, were feelingly expressed. The gifts were treated symbolically and finally Mr. Lull closed with the heartiest good wishes on the part of the teachers for Mr. Aldrich, of success in his new field of labor in the Bed Chamber city by the Charles.

In reply Mr. Aldrich referred to the pleasant relations existing between himself and the teachers, to his appreciation of their willing efforts, to his desire to be of any assistance to them in the future, and to the fact that he still has a fatherly interest in their prosperity though he had removed to another city. He expressed his thanks in fitting terms for the valuable gifts and particularly for the spirit which prompted them. In conclusion he asked the teachers to direct their steps to the room where they could down the sorrow, manifest on their faces by refreshments they would there find awaiting them.

While presenting the gifts in behalf of the teachers as a token of their esteem, Mr. Lull referred to the success that has attended all of Mr. Aldrich's efforts to keep the Quincy schools up to their high standard and even to broaden them by the introduction of nature studies. The speaker alluded to the honors won in conventions, institutes and summer schools, and also to the elevation to that most honorable body, the Board of Education. SOUTH QUINCY.

The Republican Ward Committee of Ward Three has organized by the choice of the following officers: Chairman, George O. Shirley; secretary, Thomas C. Carson; and treasurer, Charles H. Grindell.

Mrs. Henry McGrath is sick with la grippe.

Warren S. Parker is building a large double house on Quincy street for Mrs. Hannah Foley.

H. H. Lowe, contractor of South Quincy, has the contract with Perkins & White of Boston, to build loan on acres from Mr. Joseph Adams estate North Weymouth, for the Marine Park, City Point, Boston.

They are Appreciated.

This is the week for surprises, and between now and Saturday nearly everybody will be surprised. Some, however, have had theirs, and among these are Mr. John W. Golden, the genial ticket agent at the Quincy Adams station, and Mr. H. H. Safford, the station agent at the same place.

Wednesday evening at about 5 o'clock while these two young men were busily engaged at their respective stations they were called upon by Mrs. R. B. Floyd who in behalf of some forty-five friends and patrons of the station presented them each with a purse of $25 as a Christmas remembrance.

This morning another friend called and gave them each a $5 bill.

Said News.

The many friends of Mrs. Eneline Keith will be grieved to learn of her death this morning, from congestion of the lungs. She died of her illness that only her relatives and nearest friends knew she was ill. Nearly all her life she has resided in Quincy, and made many friends, especially among those attending the Universalist church, where she was a constant attendant and an interested member. Mrs. Keith was a lady of much refinement, well educated, a good mother and a faithful friend to all. Three children mourn her loss, two sons, Mr. H. A. Keith and Mr. Aubrey R. Keith, of this city, and a daughter, Mrs. George I. Jones, of Chicago, who have the sympathy of her many friends in their great loss.

Slight Accident.

The train leaving Braintree at 8:10, West Quincy at 8:16, and Atlantic at 8:24 Tuesday evening met with a mishap at Harrison Square which shook up and considerably frightened the passengers. The train was about 15 minutes late when it reached this station and had almost come to a standstill when the locomotive jumped the track and ran along on the sleepers some distance. None of the passengers were injured but they prefer to be excused next time. After a two hours delay the engine was jacked up.

School Committee May Meet.

Emory L. Crane and A. F. Roche, members of the School Committee who were absent from the meeting held last Saturday evening have requested Chairman Clifford to call a special meeting of the board for Saturday evening, that the new plans may be considered previous to the Council meeting of Monday evening. It is probable that the meeting may be held.

WOLLASTON.

The W. C. T. U. of Wollaston will meet in Baptist church, Friday, Jan. 1st, at 3 p. m.

Wednesday afternoon at the Wollaston school from two to three o'clock was set aside as the parent's hour. Each grade in the school had informal exercises relating to Christmas.

Mr. A. L. Baker has gone to Wiscasset, Maine, to spend Christmas.

One of the social events of the season was the party given by M. S. Olney, Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Whitman gave a phantom party Saturday evening.

Mr. Joseph W. Newcomb, the efficient janitor of the Wollaston school, has resigned and accepted a position with Dalton & Ingersoll, dealers in plumbers supplies, Boston.

It is said that Mr. Newcomb is the only man in the city who thoroughly understands the working of the Smead system of heating and ventilating, which is now used in some of the schools. Mr. Clarence D. Sargent succeeds Mr. Newcomb.

Prof. R. H. Mohr, the lightning caricature artist and ventriloquist, and Master George L. Pettengill, the vocalist, and banjoist gave an exceptionally fine entertainment in the Wollaston Young People's Course, at the Congregational church, Tuesday evening. The next and closing entertainment of the course will be given on Wednesday evening, Dec. 30, by Wollaston talent.

The Wollaston Baptist Christmas eve entertainment will be at 7 o'clock.

The Unitarians gave a very pretty dance at Perry's hall last week Friday evening. The matrons were Mrs. G. W. Bennett and Mrs. Henry G. Fay. Mr. Frank W. White was in charge of the dancing. Dyer's orchestra of Boston furnished the music.

Small Grass Fire.

Wollaston people, it seems, are very easily scared. The alarm from Box 56 about three o'clock Saturday afternoon was for a very small grass fire of Highland avenue. The spot burned over was about ten feet square, and no buildings were near.

The fire was all out before the box was pulled. The fire department made a remarkably quick run, arriving at the location of the corner of Newport avenue and Beale street in six minutes.

Too Great Prosperity.

Eastern people can scarcely realize the serious character of the blockade which is being maintained in the grain centers of the West. The statement is made that if all the loaded grain cars that stand waiting in the freight yards of Chicago were made into one train they would extend a distance of 125 miles. This statement probably exaggerates the facts somewhat, but the situation certainly has never had a parallel in the railroad and grain-shipping history of this country. The Burlington Railroad received into its yards at Chicago during the month of November nearly 5,000,000 bushels of grain. The same month only 1,374,000 bushels for the corresponding month last year. The St. Paul Road brought in 3,270,000 bushels during those weeks against 1,570,000 bushels for the corresponding month of 1890, while the Rock Island, Alton, Wabash, Santa Fe and Eastern Illinois increased their receipts in amounts varying between 100,000 and 400,000 bushels.—Boston Journal.

District Court, Quincy.

The attraction that filled the free seats in the District Court room Monday, was the case of Edward Duffy who was charged with the larceny of $505 from Thomas Travers. J. W. McManey appeared for the government and Paul R. Blackburn for the defendant.

The case was found probable cause to be laid by the grand jury and to recognize in $500 for his appearance at the Superior court in Dedham, April next. In default he was committed.

The case of Ralph Adams was before the court Tuesday on a warrant charging him with unlawfully injuring the dwelling of John O'Brien.

The story told by the plaintiff was that Ralph had hired him and used the beams and shingles in the house for building wood. Ralph denied this, but the court found him guilty and sentenced him to pay a fine of $10 or stand committed. Ralph said he would stand committed.

COMMISSIONER FENNEL is indignant at the open charges made by a Ward Four councilman at the meeting held Monday evening during his absence. He has thought he might ask for investigation, but upon the advice of friends it is doubtful if he will. Had Mr. Fenel paid an exorbitant price for drain pipe it might have appeared suspicious, but when he purchased it for $80 less than the lowest Quincy merchant would agree to furnish, it looks as if he was justified in buying where he did. He was emphatically wrong on a commission, and his friends have no reason to doubt his honesty.

DECEASED. John F. Pray, a veteran boot and shoe dealer of Boston died at his home in Quincy, last evening. There was a show in the hall and shortly after 8 o'clock two young men, who earn their living at South Quincy street, entered the building and approaching the ticket agent informed him that they wanted to go in. They said they had no money as they would not be paid off until Saturday. The ticket agent, who was a whole souled man, looked them over and finally taking compassion on them, allowed the clerks to enter.

PERSONAL. Some friend of Mr. Allen in this city has sent the following item from the Valparaiso Visitor:

Fred S. Allen, the fireman on engine 906, has been notified from the Beatrice office that he has fallen heir to a passenger run between Lincoln and Fairfield, and has decided to take it. This will take Fred away from Valparaiso and we are sorry to lose him. Fred is a genial, pleasant gentleman and will make friends wherever he goes. They will undoubtedly have a "best girl" at each end of his run. We congratulate Fred heartily on his "set up" and hope he may soon be promoted to the throne.

BEAUTIFUL CALENDAR. Our thank are due the Worcester Mutual Fire Insurance Company for one of their beautiful cards, entitled "Sublime Thoughts," which will be a calendar for 1892. The Grip Again.

There is, according to the reports of our physicians, a largeness of our citizens who have the grip, they add, is daily increasing in number. There are several hundred down with it, and in some cases there are three or four in a house.

It is said that no way connected with climate, soil, ration, or any known local terrestrial cause which sounds somewhat singular in view of
